THREE CENTS

Duce Offered Recognition Of Ethiopia To Quit Spain

British Draw Up Deal to Be Proposed Jointly With France.

Threat to Assist
Madrid Also Made

Would Open Border to Men and Equipment for Loyalists.

By the United Press.
London, Sept. 29.—The British cabinet agreed today to offer a "bargain" to Premier Benito Mussolini whereby his Ethiopian conquest will be recognized if he withdraws 150-000 Italian volunteers said to be fighting in Spain.

The cabinet, in two meetings which ended at 3:30 p. m., approved the contents of a note that is to be sent to Rome, probably Friday, by the British and French governments inviting Il Duce to a tri-power conference on the withdrawal of all foreign combatants from Spain.

The offer of Ethiopian recognition which Mussolini has indicated as his price for Mediterranean collaboration—will not be formally set forth in the note, but will be presented informally.

Thus the conference invitation will carry a threat and a promise
—a threat to open the Franco-Spanish frontier to permit a flow of aid to the Spanish loyalists, and a promise of recognition of the new Fascist Empire.

Mussolini is particularly anxious for British and French recognition, regardless of what the other powers of the League of Nations may do.
Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the cabinet members, all but two of whom attended, of the grave situation which would result not only in Spain but in the Mediterranean unless "definite action" for withdrawal of volunteers from Spain were taken promptly.

The French threat to open the Franco-Spanish frontier, where the last semblance of the neutrality control established by the London nonintervention committee is maintained, has been given full support of the British government, informed quarters said.

Seemingly reliable reports that Adolf Hitler refused to pledge military aid to Mussolini in event the latter became involved in more serious Mediterranean difficulties were regarded here as hopeful signs for Il Duce's conciliatory collaboration.

Recognition Long Goal.
With recognition by major powers necessary before his Ethiopian adventure pays dividends in trade, Premier Mussolini has fought for recognition through months of diplomatic maneuvering.
Political observers believe that this desire for recognition was a primary motive for the recent strengthening of Italo-German ties.
They declare that Il Duce intended European powers to see in the Rome-Berlin axis a sufficient threat to writing from them the coveted recognition of his African empire.
If the "bargain" proposed in London is approved, his maneuvering will at last have been successful.

However, an earlier "bargain"— the proposal of Sir Samuel Hoare during the Ethiopian hostilities that Mussolini be given a section of Ethiopia if he would end the war-collapsed under the weight of public indignation and resulted in Hoare's resignation as England's foreign secretary.

Broderick Due Moving Boom To Quit Reserve Board Today

Resignation Will Be Sent to Roosevelt; Post With Bank in Offing.

The resignation of Joseph A.
Broderick as a member of the Federal Reserve Board will be forwarded to President Roosevelt today, Chester C. Davis, a fellow member of the board, said last night.
In the letter Broderick will request that his resignation be made effective today.
This action, Davis said, will coincide with action of "the institution with which he (Broderick) will be connected" in New York. Announcement of Broderick's new connection, understood to be with an unidentified New York bank, also will be made today.

"It is true," said Davis when questioned last night, "that Mr.
Broderick is leaving. It is a little embarrassing, however, in that he did not desire his resignation to become known in advance, since his letter to the President will be dated tomorrow (Thursday), and the action of the institution with which he will be connected will be made known then, too."

Broderick's appointment last year to the Reserve Board followed years of active banking experience and an intimate connection early in his career with the reserve system itself.

Post Readers Invited to Make New Animals At Home in D. C. Zoo by Giving Them Names

U. S. Names Six to Lead Cancer Fight

Noted Group Will Direct Institute Created by Congress.

Grants for Research to Be Discussed at Meeting in October.

Leaders in the Government's first intensive drive to eliminate cancer were announced yesterday by the United States Public Health Service.
The group, to be known as the National Advisory Cancer Council, will direct the activities of the National Cancer Institute authorized two months ago by Act of Congress.

Six prominent scientists appointed to the council are Dr. James Ewing, director of cancer research at the Memorial Hospital, New York City, and professor of pathology at Cornell University; Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the Crocker Institute of Cancer Research at Columbia University; Dr. C. C. Little, of Bar Harbor, Me., managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer; Dr. Arthur H. Compton, professor of physics at Coalgate University; Dr. James B.
Conant, president of Harvard University, former chairman of Harvard's chemistry department, and Dr. Ludwig Hektoen, professor and head of the department of pathology at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Hektoen is now in Washington as chairman of the division of medical sciences of the National Research Council.

Parran to Serve.
Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, will serve as chairman of the council ex-officio. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau approved the appointments, which were made by Dr. Parran.

At its first meeting, probably to be held during October, the council will discuss the basis on which it will make grants in aid to cancer research programs, establish fellowships and loan funds. These functions were specified in the National Cancer Institute act, signed August 5.
Construction has not yet been begun on the institute, which will be built on land in Bethesda, Md., donated by Luke Wilson. It will be part of the Public Health Service's National Institute of Health, directed by Assistant Surgeon General
Lewis R. Thompson. Dr. Parran said yesterday that a director had not yet been named for the cancer institute.

All Are Active.

All six men already are active in the fight on cancer. Dr. Ewing was one of the three collaborators on the monograph, "What We Know About Cancer," for the American Society for Cancer Control and has written many articles on the subject. He has been called "the foremost American investigator of cancerous diseases." Dr. Wood is vice president of the International Union Against Cancer and editor of the American Journal of Cancer.

Dr. Little, head of the Roscoe B.
Jackson Memorial Laboratory, has published many articles on genetics and cancer research. Dr. Arthur H.
Compton, who won the Nobel prize for physics in 1927, is noted for his research in the X-ray field. Dr.
Conant is noted not only as an educator, but as a chemist. He is a member of the board of scientific directors of Rockefeller Institute.

Dr. Hektoen has been head of the John McCormick Institute for Infectious Diseases since 1904. He is also the editor of the Journal of Infectious Diseases and the Archives of Pathology and has written numerous books on pathology, bacteriology and immunology.

The bill specified that members of the council should be "selected from leading medical or scientific authorities who are outstanding in the study, diagnosis, or treatment of cancer in the United States."

Leaving Bank.

By the Associated Press.
Midland, Mich., Sept. 29.—A crack-shot dentist, Dr. F. L. Hardy, who had kept his deer gun handy for months during a wave of attempted bank robberies in Michigan, fired twice; through his office window today and brought down two fleeing bandits, killing one.
The dead man was Jack Gracey,
28, of Detroit, a parolee convict.
His companion, Anthony Cheba-toris, 37, also of Detroit, and a former convict, was wounded in the arm.

Three other men were shot in the gun battle that followed an attempted bank holdup, thirteenth of the year in Michigan. Paul D. Bywater, cashier of the Chemical State Savings Bank, was wounded seriously in the hip and lower body; Clarence H. Macomber, bank president, suffered a superficial chest wound, and Henry Porter, Bay City truck driver, was wounded critically in the abdomen.

The two gunmen, carrying submachine guns, entered the bank about noon. One stood at the entrance while the other walked to Macomber's desk, ordered "Put up your hands!" and shoved the gun into his side when he delayed.

Bywater, who had not seen the robbers enter, saw the scuffle and ran to Macomber's assistance. The robber near the door shot Bywater.
Then the robbers fled, with no money. Dr. Hardy, who had heard the shooting, was waiting at the window of his office.

"I saw two men run out with the submachine guns," he related, "and jump into a car. As they pulled away from the curb I fired across the top of a passing automobile and their car went out of control. I think I hit one of them. They both jumped out and ran. I fired again and killed one of them."

Just before Gracey fell dead, either he or Chebatoris shot Porter, who was passing in a truck, apparently in the belief it was he who shot at them.

Bombing Defended.
By the Associated Press.
Tokyo (Thursday), Sept. 30.—The Japanese government today defended as strategically necessary the aerial bombing of Nanking which drew a formal protest from the United States.

The Japanese point of view was contained in a reply, made public today, to the American protest of September 22, transmitted after oral representations against Japan's announced intentions of subjecting the Chinese capital to a mass aerial bombardment.

The Japanese government added in its note:
"We hope for the co-operation of your government."

The note was delivered to the United States Embassy, written in Japanese.

Military Necessity.
Following is an unofficial translation:
"As your Government knows full well, Nanking, unlike any other city in China, is a strongly fortified city. It is the base of China's military operations, and it is necessary for Japan's purposes to bomb military organs and establishments in and out of the city.

"Japanese bombing is only directed at those military organs and has not the intention to cause damage to noncombatants. Before bombing, Japan warned Chinese non-combatants.

"Japan's policy of respecting as far as possible the lives, property and interests of people of third powers is unchanged as already has been repeatedly declared. Japan warned American officials, people and warships to take refuge and take general precautions in order to prevent accidents. Japan's military officials gave preliminary warning, despite the fact this caused no small delay in carrying out military operations."

Request U. S. Co-operation.
"We hope for the co-operation of your Government, believing your Government fully understands the situation.

"The intentions of the Japanese government concerning damages suffered by people of third powers resulting from the fighting in China are as stated in a letter dated August 31."

(The Japanese note was received Wednesday in Washington, but its contents were not disclosed.

(In the American note to which it was a reply Secretary Hull protested formally that Japanese aerial attacks on large Chinese centers of civilian population were "unwarranted and contrary to principles of law and humanity."

(The American note also served notice on Japan she would be held responsible for any damage which might be suffered by Americans from Japanese military operations in the Nanking area.)

Wallace Says AAA Crop Control Is Indorsed by Agriculture Institute

Move to Drop Scarcity Policy Seen in Words

Secretary's 'Middle Way' for Cotton Is Held Compromise.

By Russell Smith

Far from disapproving of Agricultural Adjustment Administration crop control, the International Institute of Agriculture has endorsed "exactly what we are doing," Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said yesterday.

In his discussion of the Institute's report, Wallace clearly indicated the trend of the AAA away from what has been termed "scarcity" economics.

The Institute's report had been severely critical of "leveling down" farm output to keep pace with dwindling demand. By agreeing with the general tenor of the report, Wallace further confirmed those who have believed the Secretary's recent strong emphasis on "parity income" rather than "parity prices" as a barometer of farm welfare.

Indicated the line along which Federal agricultural policy is developing.

Terminology printed in this country September 2 "misleading" as to the intent of the full report, Wallace said.

"What the report did say was that unless it is skillfully used, Government intervention in agriculture will bring about too great an expansion of production—the exact opposite of the impression conveyed by the newspaper despatches at the time."

The Secretary made his statements at a press conference, reading from a typed summation of the report, which, in turn, had been drawn from a lengthy summary prepared by L. A. Wheeler, in charge of the Foreign Agricultural Service Division of the Agriculture Department, for Dr. A. G. Black, agricultural economics bureau chief.

Wallace had studied the report of the Institute, after analysis by department experts extending over nearly a month, before he answered the apparent criticism in printed excerpts of the report.

Wallace concluded his press conference with a discussion of his Memphis speech, October 1, when he will attempt to bring about reconciliation with those who are clamoring for payment of the cotton subsidies authorized by the last session of Congress after compliance with to-be-enacted control program.

Wallace's "middle way" is a course midway between complete abandonment of world markets and unlimited expansion of acreage.

In the course of this discussion the Secretary warned, gravely, against the inflation of the price of cotton as would stimulate "expansion of acreage in India and a possibility of an explosion worse than that" which attended the Federal Farm Board experiment.

Fire Prevention Week Proclaimed By District Heads

Washingtonians yesterday were called upon by the District Commissioners in formal proclamation to join the Nation in observance of Fire Prevention Week beginning Sunday.

"The Commissioners do hereby call upon all citizens of the District of Columbia to give serious thought and consideration during that period to the prevention of unnecessary fire loss which each year takes its disastrous toll of life and property, which can largely be obviated by the exercise of proper care and the use of appropriate fire prevention measures."

$147,627 Granted District for Needy

Federal grants totaling $7,024,440 for five States, the District of Columbia and Hawaii were announced yesterday by the Social Security Board for the quarter beginning tomorrow.

The District grant was $147,627.84, of which $101,312.67 is for old age assistance to 3,500 persons, $3,458.70 aid for 170 blind persons, and $42,856.47 for 3,510 dependent children.

Elwood Street, director of public assistance, said the grant and the number to be aided are virtually the same as usual.

The grant will be matched by District funds. The aged average monthly allotments of $25 in the District; the blind, $26, and dependent children, $15.

Politics and People

President Enters Most Interesting Political Situation Encountered on Tour.

By Franklyn Waltman

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 29.—Idaho and Oregon have presented the most interesting local political situations to President Roosevelt in his swing so far through the Northwest States.

The most interesting because of the clashes of political factions which will take place next year and which already are commencing to take form.

It is unrealistic to become excited about what will happen to Senator Burke, O'Mahoney and Wheeler, because they are not compelled to face voters until 1940—and a great deal can happen in politics before that year is reached.

But re-election campaigns of Senators Pope and Steiwer, in Idaho and Oregon, respectively, already have started. Their situations are not alike. One is a Democrat, the other is a Republican.

One supported the Supreme Court reorganization plan. The other opposed it. One supports all that the President proposes. The other is and has been sharply critical of President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Idaho presents to the New Dealers a State where it may become necessary for them to exert every influence and power at their command to save one of the court plan supporters from defeat at the hands of a Democratic opponent of that scheme.

There they will be on the defensive. Pope has been a thoroughgoing New Dealer. Overshadowed by his colleague, Senator Borah, he has not made a brilliant record.

Wallace had studied the report of the Institute, after analysis by department experts extending over nearly a month, before he answered the apparent criticism in printed excerpts of the report.

Wallace concluded his press conference with a discussion of his Memphis speech, October 1, when he will attempt to bring about reconciliation with those who are clamoring for payment of the cotton subsidies authorized by the last session of Congress after compliance with to-be-enacted control program.

an excellent vote-getter in Republican Idaho even before the New Deal was inaugurated, is said not to be as good a candidate as he was last year or two years before that. But Pope is not Borah.

Clark comes from a family well known in Idaho politics. He is a nephew of the present Governor, Barzilla W. Clark. But they belong to different Democratic factions. Gov. Clark is a Pope supporter, and as has been said, Ross, teaming up with young Clark, may run for the governorship or, possibly, may run against Gov. Clark.

Another uncle of young Clark is Mayor of Idaho Falls. A graduate of Harvard Law School, Representative Clark has been a member of the House to state publicly his opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization plan.

Clark is a conservative Democrat. He was one of the first members of the House to state publicly his opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization plan.

The factor in Idaho that places Pope in a precarious position is primarily the system. When registering voters are not required to state their party affiliation, and on primary election day there is a single ballot on which both Republican and Democratic contests appear. Under that arrangement, Republicans may participate in the Democratic primary without identifying themselves.

It is unlikely the Republicans will have either a senatorial or gubernatorial primary contest next year. Thus they will be free to vote for a conservative Democratic senatorial nominee as a blow at the New Deal. And there are quite a number of Republicans left in Idaho. Alf M. Landon received 66,499 votes in the State (which, however, was less than one-half of the total received by Mr. Roosevelt).

In Oregon, the Democrats are determined to defeat Republican Senator Steiwer. Unlike his colleague, Senator Borah, he has not made a brilliant record.

Family of Five Happy at Move Into Greenbelt

25 Apartments in Model Community Ready for Occupants.

After next Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Allen D. Morrison and three small children will receive their mail at 58-H Crescent road, Greenbelt, Md. They are one of the first 25 families selected for the Government model community and they now live at 223 Eighteenth street south.

When the Farm Security Administration notified them Tuesday they felt that luck was smiling in their direction. "We got just the apartment we selected. It will be swell for the children, and plenty good for us, too."

"We're from a small town and we're glad to be going to a place where there will be neighborhood activities and lots of talking going on," Morrison said.

The family will have exactly double the room they have now. They will have three bedrooms, rather than their present two, and they will have a living room and a dining room—neither of which they have now.

Their rent will be $36.50 for the six rooms, with heat included. Electricity and water probably will run their monthly bill to around $41. At their present address they pay $28.50 for three rooms, with everything extra. Counting coal for heat and gas and electricity, their monthly bill always averages around $40, they said.

"Mind you, though, we don't say we have been paying too much for what we got. The family who is moving in here will pay $3 more on the month than we are. We just are overworked and must have some place in which to raise the children. Six nice rooms in Washington would cost us twice what those six will cost us at Greenbelt," the father said.

Morrison is employed in the accounting department of the Veterans Administration on a civil service rating. His salary comes in the $1,500 to $1,800 brackets. He moved to Washington from Missouri three years ago after his hometown area had suffered severely from dust storms. He owns a small farm, but was in the real estate business "which also went under."

Investigated? Sure! They applied for a Greenbelt home when applications were first accepted 18 months ago. They believe the Government has been perfectly fair in its methods of selection—but do not believe they were not "investigated."

"They know all about us there is to know," Morrison declared. The Morrissons could have moved to Greenbelt today, but have to sell their electric refrigerator and get things packed up. That will take until Wednesday, they believe.

Morrison will ride the bus to and from his work, paying $1.50 weekly. He considers this fair enough, since he pays $125 a week now while living inside the city limits.

Roy S. Braden, former county manager for Arlington County, Va., and community manager for the Greenbelt project, will open his offices there today. He has been on the job for several months, but his official offices above the general store are just now ready for occupancy.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, yesterday stated he will report his inspection of local institutions this fall prior to hearings on the 1939 municipal budget. A similar tour was made by the sub-committee last year.

Hearings are scheduled to start on the District budget the middle of November so that the District supply bill will be ready for House action as soon as Congress convenes.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, yesterday stated that he would favor a reduction in District taxes next year rather than an increase in the budget. He is a member of the Senate District Committee.

There is some doubt as to whether he can be nominated. Conservative Democrats, including Gov. Martin, are generally opposed to him and most probably will get behind 36-year-old Carl C. Donough, Federal district attorney, and a close friend of Jim Farley.

The problem created by power development at Bonneville Dam is certain to be an issue, with Mahoney taking the radical side supported by Mr. Roosevelt in his Tuesday speech. But Mr. Roosevelt's thesis of distribution of Bonneville power over a wide area has created a sharp cleavage of opinion in Portland, the principal city of Oregon, and it might react against Mahoney.

D. C. Gas Utility Abandons Plea To Buy 2 Firms

Hyattsville and Alexandria Purchase Petition Is Withdrawn.

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday asked leave of the Public Utilities Commission to withdraw its petition for authority to acquire control of the Washington Suburban Gas Co., of Hyattsville, and the Alexandria Gas Co.

The petition had been pending before the commission since March, and the utility had indicated it would not grant it. Previously, the commission had denied an application of the company for outright purchase of the two suburban properties.

Under the revised plan, the gas company proposed to acquire all outstanding stock and certain obligations of the smaller companies from their parent company, Washington & Suburban Cos., and to pay it by issuing 12,500 shares of 4 1/2 per cent convertible preferred stock in the Washington Gas Light Co.

The par value of this stock would amount to $1,250,000, commission officials said. In its original offer the gas company asked authority to borrow money and to pay $1,375,000 for the properties.

When the offer was first brought to the attention of the commission, gas company officials explained that it was part of a move to ease the parent holding company, Washington & Suburban Cos., out of the metropolitan area of the Capital.

'Army' to Guard Federal Courts Created by Bar

Lawyers Unanimous in Backing Plan to Stop Judiciary Inroads.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Sept. 29.—The American Bar Association created a seven-man standing army today, ready to spring into action in the event of further attempts to revise the Federal judiciary system.

Without opposition or debate, a record-breaking attendance of the association's assembly voiced approval of a special committee's report recommending the setting up of a commission of seven members to meet any new efforts to "remake the courts."

The bar's legislative body, the house of delegates, added its prompt ratification to the assembly's expression, likewise unanimously approving the report prepared by a committee headed by Sylvester C. Smith, Jr., of Phillipsburg, N. J.

Th committee will be appointed by the association's president. It will be instructed to report any proposed changes in the country's judicial system to the association for a membership referendum, which would guide the action of the commission.

Another reverberation of the Supreme Court controversy was the effort of Lessing Rosenthal, Chicago, to record the bar as favoring mandatory public hearings in the Senate on Supreme Court nominations.

Rosenthal's resolution, which he was inspired by President Roosevelt's appointment of Senator Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court, was ruled out of assembly consideration when it failed to receive the unanimous approval necessary because of its tardy submission.

He said he would seek to have it substituted in the resolutions committee for a resolution submitted by Robert Lee Tullis, former dean of law at Louisiana State University, proposing an investigation of the fitness of Justice Black for court membership.

After a flurry of heated discussion, the assembly voted to abandon consideration of the pending Federal child labor amendment other than child labor amendment but the House of Delegates, highest legislative body of the association, decided to take up the report tomorrow in final action. The Assembly voted to table the report.

Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, warned the bar tonight that the Nation's lawyers must "do something pretty promptly" if they are to continue to "command sufficient respect to impose on the country their conception of justice."

RE-GROW HAIR

Science has found that the hair-growing structure (papilla) remains alive and ready to respond to proper stimulative treatment even long after hair has disappeared from the scalp.

Thomas has perfected a method of stimulating this dormant hair-growing structure to normal activity. First, Thomas treatment removes the causes of inactivity (usually one or more of 14 local scalp disorders) and then skillfully supplies the necessary stimulation and thus makes it possible for the hair to gain sufficient strength to push through the follicle and become visible again on the scalp.

Come in person to the nearest Thomas office TODAY and learn more about this precise, reliable method of growing hair, stopping hair-fall, and ending dandruff. No charge will be made for consultation or scalp examination. You will not be accepted for treatment unless your case comes within the scope of Thomas methods.

Fidelity Head Indicted on Perjury Charges for False Reports on Holdings

Rhodes Twice Won Mistrials In Other Cases

Lawyer-Financier Still Is Facing 28 Other Accusations.

Fred B. Rhodes, lawyer-president of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association, who is faced with 28 charges in connection with the closing of that institution, was named by the District Grand Jury yesterday in two more indictments, charging him with perjury.

Tried twice on prior charges, Rhodes was granted a mistrial when the jurors failed to agree.

Rhodes is accused of swearing falsely in verification of a report showing the condition of the building association for the period ending June 30, 1935, and with swearing falsely to the subsequent six months report.

Rene E. Stifely, 29-year-old former chief of the voucher unit of the National Park Service, was indicted on eight counts of forgery and four of presenting false payroll sheets to his superiors for approval. Approximately $75,000 is involved.

The hold-up of the crowded S and W Cafeteria last August was attributed to Alfred H. Brauer, George Washington University student, and alleged "Master Criminal," Harry G. Smith, and William P. Allen, in an indictment. His youthful wife, Dorothy, who sat with Brauer while his colleagues robbed the place, was not indicted.

Fierce Japanese Attack Fails to Break Chinese Line

Shanghai Front Is Silent After Terrific Battle

Fire Again Started in Chapei by Heavy Bombardment.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Sept. 30.—Chinese defenders of Shanghai held their lines intact today after weathering a terrific offensive into which Japan hurled every weapon she could muster.

Early today, after some of the fiercest close-range fighting before Shanghai since the outbreak of the undeclared war, the front was silent. Japanese warships, lining the Whangpoo River from Shanghai to Woosung, where it merges with the Yangtze, lay in darkness their lights extinguished.

The only sign of war left from the Japanese attack on land, sea and from the air was a fire in the Chapei district which, with the industrial Pootung area across the Whangpoo from the International Settlement, suffered heaviest in the heavy firing.

Fighting still raged in the Lihou-Lotien sector, about 25 miles to the northwest. Both sides claimed victories there.

Chinese commanders declared their line was holding all the way from Chapei to Lihou against combined land and air attacks and were prepared for a new Japanese attack in force.

New Commander in North.

The Japanese admittedly were attempting to break through the Chapei sector, but the Chinese showed no sign of weakening.

"The Japanese can blast us forever but they will never dialogue us," declared Gen. Sun Yun-Liang, commanding the Chapei defenses. "Burned twice, Chapei has become one of the nation's greatest military shrines. Weeks of continuous, concentrated Japanese attacks have failed."

"We have found the Japanese infantrymen poor fighters and it seldom requires much effort to defeat them in hand-to-hand combat. While the center of fighting returned close to Shanghai after a lapse of more than a week, Nanking, China's capital, enjoyed a respite from the almost daily Japanese air raids."

Advices from Nanking said Gen. Pai Tsung-hsi, one of China's ablest strategists, has been put in command of all Chinese armies in North China. Gen. Pai was expected to weld the independent provincial units into a unified army.

Japanese naval attacks on the China coast have broadened. Chinese customs authorities declared a Japanese cruiser off Pakhoi, on the southern Kwangtung coast, shelled junks and other small craft while a Japanese naval plane bombed and machine-gunned the city and a ship in its harbor.

British and German passengers arriving at Hongkong reported seeing a Japanese destroyer sink two Chinese junks with machine-gun fire 10 miles off the South China coast.

Two Japanese planes were shot down in the Canton area where air attacks caused heavy casualties. About 40 Chinese were killed and 100 wounded in an aerial machine-gun attack on the village of Chiulin. The heroism of 20 Chinese soldiers cost their lives early yesterday but failed in a dramatic attempt to sink the cruiser Idzumo, Japanese flagship in Shanghai waters.

The soldiers labored in darkness, some swimming and some using sampans, to float a heavy mine under the Idzumo's side. When they were detected at daylight, almost finished with their hazardous job, their comrades touched off the mine, killing the soldiers but ripping a wide hole in the steel net protecting the Idzumo.

The battle for Shanghai lasted throughout the day and until long after darkness but the swampy terrain left from heavy rains hampered Japan's mechanized forces, compelling them to withdraw tanks and motorized units and use cavalry. Explosions shook the city as a fleet of 30 Japanese warplanes, flying in swift relays from a base only 5 miles away, dropped 250-pound and 500-pound demolition bombs on the North Station and Chapei areas.

Japan "Suspects" Russia.

Tokyo (Thursday), Sept. 30 (U.P.).—A "certain quarter" (presumably the war office) has been informed that Soviet Russia is furnishing men and munitions to China in her war with Japan, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported today.

Ten Russian officers are assisting in the defense of Nanking, according to the report, and Marshal Yasuli Blucher, commander of the Soviet Far Eastern Army, is in daily radio telephone conversation with the Soviet military attaché in Nanking, Gen. Lepin.

Marshal Blucher, who was military adviser to Chinese nationalist armies from 1924 to 1927, is advising the Chinese army on tactics through Gen. Lepin, it was charged.

British Groups Hit 'Barbarism' in Chinese War

Industrial, Labor Parleys Urge Embargo, Boycott of Japanese.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 29.—Great Britain's mounting public resentment against Japanese war activity in China was voiced today by industrialists and labor leaders in separate meetings. Expressing horror at the "barbarous and systematic massacre by Japanese aircraft and submarines of the defenseless Chinese civilian population," the National Council of Labor urged the government to ban war materials sales or monetary loans to Japan.

The council also asked that League of Nations members be urged to co-operate in embargoing imports from Japan.

At the same time the Federation of British Industries considered the situation at a joint meeting with the London, Manchester and Bradford chambers of commerce and the China Association of Commerce.

The meeting drafted a joint resolution urging the government to prevent further damage to British property in China and pressing for energetic action to obtain compensation for damage already done.

A widespread movement to boycott Japanese goods was reported under way as a protest against the Japanese campaign.

The London Labor Council announced it would ask American labor unions to co-operate in the drive against Japanese goods.

British Abandon War Insurance in Air Raid Fright

London, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—The long range destructive power of modern aircraft caused British insurance companies today to cease issuing war risk insurance.

Citing the havoc wrought by bombing planes in Spain and China, nearly 300 British companies declared the developments of aerial warfare have introduced an incalculable hazard in such insurance. They argued that their move would encourage peace on the basis that financial interests would work for peace if they have to pay their own war losses.

Retired Naval Officer, Father Of Five Others, Congratulated

Secretary Swanson Sends Letter to Lieut. H. E. Olsen, Cites Record as 'Manifestation of Patriotism of Highest Order.'

A letter of congratulation was sent yesterday to Lieut. Hjalmar E. Olsen, U. S. Navy, retired, father of five naval officers, by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson. Pointing out that "including yourself, this is a total of six members of the same immediate family in the Navy," Secretary Swanson wrote that "Such a record is indeed remarkable and is a manifestation of practical patriotism of the highest order."

Lieut. Olsen, who was born in Norway in 1860, entered the Navy 20 years later. His five sons have all entered the service since 1915 via the Naval Academy. Lieut. Comdr. Charles E. Olsen, the first Academy graduate, is now on duty as an instructor at Annapolis.

Another son, Lieut. Comdr. Clarence E. Olsen, U. S. Navy, is on duty in the Hydrographic Office at the Navy Department, while a third, Lieut. Earl K. Olsen, U. S. Navy, is attached to the Engineering Experiment Station at Annapolis, Md.

Appointed mate in 1887, Lieut. Olsen served during the Spanish American War on the battleship Iowa. He retired from the Navy in 1904 after reaching the rank of boatswain. In 1906 he was recalled to active duty and served at the Naval Training Station, North Chicago, Ill.

During the World War Lieut. Olsen was again on active duty at the Great Lakes Training Station, Ill. Lieut. (jg) Robert Irving Olsen, U. S. Navy, is on duty on the U. S. Pollack, and his younger brother, Midshipman Albert R. Olsen, will graduate from the Naval Academy in June.

7 More 'Grain Spoilers' Condemned by Soviet Moscow, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Seven more "grain spoilers" were sentenced to death today, bringing to 50 the total of prisoners condemned since a series of trials began two weeks ago.

Four were convicted in the Kharkov region of the Ukraine and three in Crimea. Ten persons convicted of disrupting electric power service at Leningrad were sent to their deaths, the official Communist publication, Pravda, announced.

Japanese Army Rigidly Trained To Keep Awake

U. S. Officer With Troops Amazed at 'No Sleep' Regimen.

By the Associated Press.

An American Army officer with the Japanese infantry found an officer of the Mikado's troops advocating fatigue as an essential part of a soldier's training.

The rare circumstance of a "foreign barbarian" serving "to all intents and purposes" as an officer in the Imperial Japanese Army is related by Capt. Harold Doud, U. S. A. "We went through three days and two nights without sleep," he writes in an article for the Infantry Journal, during which Capt. Teshima carefully explained to him that rest was unnecessary. "Oh, no!" he quotes the commander. "That is not necessary. The men already know how to sleep. They need training in how to stay awake."

Doud, studying in Japan, had been invited to spend six months with the Second Company, Seventh Regiment, at Kanazawa, and take part in combat firing. They marched all night in a steady downpour to reach the training field, he says, staged mimic warfare for two days, and marched back 25 miles in burning sunshine. Then the weary men, ready to fall out, were ordered at double time around and around the barracks.

"I'm just proving to my men that they still have lots of 'go' and are not nearly as tired as they may think they are," their officer told Doud.

They started out at 5 o'clock one morning and marched without a stop until 10 the next morning, covering an almost unbelievable 56 miles.

"Sometimes the men slept while walking," Doud writes. "Our junior lieutenant caused much amusement by marching squarely into a lumber pile while sound asleep."

The American was deeply impressed with the issuing of rifles to new conscripts.

"Giving a rifle to a Japanese soldier," he says, "is not the casual affair it is in our Army, but a ceremony of real and deep significance."

The entire company was formed on the parade ground facing a long rack of rifles. Captain Teshima explained the honor and responsibility of being entrusted with a rifle. Each new soldier then stepped forward as his name was called, bowed deeply to the rifle in the captain's hands, took the rifle, raised it in obeisance to his forehead, saluted and stepped back in the ranks."

Freedom Is Near For Harold Dahl

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Arrangements apparently were completed tonight for the release of Harold E. Dahl, of Champaign, Ill., who was shot down by Spanish insurgents during a government air offensive at Brunete last July and has been their prisoner since.

The 28-year-old flier will face a court-martial at Salamanca October 5 as a preliminary to his release, insurgent officers believed. An arrangement for an exchange of Dahl for an insurgent flier held prisoner by government forces rested with the International Red Cross.

Frozen Caviar and Noisy Toast Try Patience of Soviet Polar Party

Dull Routine Described by Radio Operator

4 Isolated on Arctic Floe Don't Take Baths for Fear of Freezing.

By the Associated Press.
Moscow, Sept. 29.—The monotonous routine of work and relaxation for the four unwashed (it's too cold for baths) members of the Soviet polar party, camping on a drifting ice floe, was described today by their radio operator, Ernest Krenkel.

Falling temperatures were adding to inconveniences of their existence. Caviar, cheese and butter froze so hard they had difficulty in eating them and ice encased the tiny hut in which they live.

At breakfast, Krenkel related, they soaked their toast in water so the crunching as they chewed would not awaken the party leader, Ivan D. Papanin, sleeping at that hour.

"I am on watch until midnight," Krenkel said. "Then I awaken Eugene Federov, the camp magnetologist, who takes the morning weather observations."

"A voice from Rudolf Island asks the weather report. We exchange news, telling what we hear on the radio."

"Federov remains in the tent or goes to the ice hut, where he busies himself over his charts. For myself, there comes the happy moment. I go into my sleeping bag."

"About 9 a. m. Papanin and Pyotr Shirsov, hydrobiologist, awaken. Shirsov, to train himself to get up quickly, has a bar of chocolate above his head. The man who awakens him has a stop watch. If Shirsov's feet are not on the floor in five minutes, the chocolate is given to someone else."

"Because of the need to conserve fuel, only Shirsov, who spends his whole day at scientific work in the tent, washes his face once every two weeks. He is dirty from oil and grease and his hands are blue from the icy water. But he is obtaining interesting data from his observations."

Krenkel told of conversations at tea time turning to Spain, China and Moscow. He said the campers listen regularly to Moscow news broadcasts.

"At night our dog cries in its sleep like it was having a nightmare," he added. "All around, it is so quiet you can hear ice cracking in the distance."

of the moving spree's volume, are running approximately 25 per cent ahead of last year.

Similarly, business was brisk at the meter desk of the National Electric Power Co., although officials there said it was still too early to tell how it will compare with previous "moving days" in the Capital.

Real estate agencies, particularly those specializing in apartment rentals, reported greater activity than last year. One said that houses as well as apartments are figuring in the seasonal rush.

Movers Held Lucky.

The conspicuous increase in moving volume was attributed by some to the greater choice of living accommodations than ever before, brought about by the construction of many apartment houses, duplex dwellings and houses during the past year.

"The resident whose lease expires tomorrow," said one agent, "has a much better selection, if he cares to move, than he had a year ago. With the sizable increase in new apartments, vacancies in the older places have gone up in number, giving the renter a double-edged advantage."

October 1 has come to be "moving day" in Washington because more leases expire on that day than any other.

One real estate agent, however, declared yesterday that moving operations in Washington are coming to be spread out more evenly over the entire year, due to what he termed a rising tendency to transfer Government employees.

Woman Is Freed In N. Y. Murder

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Prosecution of Miss Gertrude O'Keefe on a charge of murdering her former suitor collapsed today when a Brooklyn magistrate ruled there was not sufficient evidence against her. The 37-year-old typist, arrested after George O. Frank, 47, was found shot to death near her home, was acquitted by a jury yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Anthony Digiovanna had argued: "The motive is plain. She loved him. He left her for another woman. It is the age-old triangle."

They Meet at the End of the Line—After 47 Years

Jake Fischel (left), as he took the throttle for the last time yesterday, ending 47 years of railroading. Before his train pulled out of Union Station he met, for the first time, Charles A. Bond, a conductor, who was quitting after 47 years.

Engineer Jake, 67, Makes Run To Cumberland for Last Time

By Eugene Warner.
It's 154 miles from Washington to Cumberland on the Baltimore & Ohio, and old Jake Fischel made the run yesterday for the last time. Jake was a picturesque figure as his big engine chuffed out of Union Station, leaning from the cab window he knew so well, a stump of stogie in his teeth.

At 67, Jake has been a railroad man 40 years and 6 months. He guesses the railroads are here to stay. But he isn't. "I got two or three more years left in me," he shouted, "and I'm gonna spend 'em in a rockin' chair, doing nothing."

"I got enough," he chuckled, chewed his cigar a little and watched with complete disinterest his fireman, Tommy Atkins, from Memphis, as Tom battled the golden-red maw of the furnace with a slice bar.

On the platform looking up at old Jake was Charles A. Bond, a yard conductor, who is 65. He's quitting today too, after hopping around railroad tracks for 47 years, making up trains in the scorching summer suns which only Washington knows, and the sleet and snow of winter, with never an accident.

"I'm gonna take it easy," Charley said to Jake. "I worked long enough."

The two old men, who strangely, had never met before, smiled gravely, as though pleased but not quite comprehending this tremendous thing of a workman's laying down his tools. Perhaps the question in their eyes was whether a pension of $100 a month for Jake and $80 for Charley would compensate for the loss of jobs that have been the guiding factor in their lives.

Jake told Charley how in 1906 coming into Washington he suddenly saw a train backing toward him at a rapid rate.

"I jumped out just before she smacked my engine," he said. "My engine was wrecked and about five or six of his cars were smashed up, but I wasn't hurt—except," and he laughed, "when I was walking away,

Spanish Armies In Hot Fight for Road to France

Rebels Bomb Barcelona and Lerida; Madrid Claims Advance.

By the Associated Press.
Hendaya, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 29.—A large-scale battle throughout northeast Spain raged tonight as government and insurgent forces struggled for control of principal avenues to the French border.

The fight was for possession of areas which might provide, for the government, a broad lane for transport of French munitions and supplies, and, for insurgents, isolation of government Spain from Barcelona and Upper Catalonia.

Lerida and Barcelona felt the shock of insurgent air bombs, but the main fighting was conducted on the Aragon front. Insurgents said they had taken the offensive at Zaragoza, in the middle of the Aragon front, while both armies were deadlocked at Jaca, near the French border.

The government said its forces had advanced 16 miles in the last week, placing the Jaca front beyond 19 towns formerly held by insurgents. Sabinsaga, with a valuable munitions factory, was under government machine gun and artillery fire.

The Jaca battle included some of the heaviest fighting seen on the Aragon front. Insurgents set government casualties at 1,000, but gave no accounting of their own losses.

Both insurgent and government sources agreed on the importance of the battle, described in dispatches to the Iron commandancia as "a face-to-face struggle" on a 2-mile front.

Along the Asturian front, insurgents said, new advances were made on Gijon, last government-held Biscayan port.

On the board which aided Col. Craig in selection of Green were Lieut. Paul L. Doer, professor of military tactics at Central, under whom Green has had his cadet training; Maj. Col. Green will give his son his saber. Of English ancestry, the Greens have been veterans of many wars. There were Greens in England's perpetual wars against France, Greens in the Crimea, and on his mother's side Green had ancestors in the Civil War.

Yesterday afternoon in the pleasant living room of the family home at 1322 Vermont avenue northwest, Green looked at his corporal's chevrons, which soon will disappear.

And his father, heavy-set veteran of three campaigns, smiled and congratulated a son who is following in his footsteps.

Martin Ousts Ten Organizers Of Motor Union

Economy Given as Reason for Shakeup of U. A. W. Staff.

By the Associated Press.
Detroit, Sept. 29.—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, dismissed ten organizers today for "economy reasons."

Martin has several times hinted at a "purge" of left wing forces, but did not identify today's action as such.

Informal sources said Martin has contended that the international union was paying the salaries and expenses of too many organizers.

Those dismissed were Victor Reuther, one of the leaders in the General Motors strike at Flint, Mich., last winter; Robert Kanter, Stanley Novak, Melvin Bishop and William Tonn, of Detroit; R. D. Richter, of Saginaw; Charles Rigby, Ohio; Frank Bartee, Canada; Frank McMillan, Kansas City; Eugene Stauder, Anderson, Ind., and Frank Schulz, Indiana.

Martin announced he had promoted Loren Houser to be organizational director for Detroit. Elmer Dowell was made director of all General Motors locals in the Nation.

Expulsion Move Mapped.
Denver, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Fourteen industrial unions banded together tonight under the leadership of William D. Hutcheson to fight for expulsion of C. I. O. organizations at next week's American Federation of Labor convention.

Hutcheson, who controls 3,000 votes as president of the largest loyal A. F. of L. union—the United Brotherhood of Carpenters—assumed charge of the campaign against the John L. Lewis unions.

Smaller unions, gathered at pre-convention meetings, climbed on the expulsion bandwagon. A high official of the federation estimated that 14 of the principal A. F. of L. units—representing over 8,000 votes—had decided to oust the rebel faction.

Veterans in Paris Riot for Fewer French Bedbugs

Paris, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Several hundred American Legionnaires, many of whom bunked with French civilians during the war, still stormed up and down the streets tonight threatening to leave Paris if they have to sleep with any more bedbugs.

Garbage Can Used As Iron Lung in Alaska Epidemic

Juneau, Alaska, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—An iron lung made from a garbage can was held ready for use today in the event of further outbreaks of infantile paralysis.

The apparatus, put together by Dr. Robert M. Coffey with the aid of a machinist, Kenyon McLean, transformed the garbage can into a respirating device which causes the subject to inhale and exhale at a rate of 26 times a minute.

Territorial health officials three days ago prohibited Juneau children from traveling anywhere in Alaska as a precaution against the disease. Juneau schools were closed until October 11, with possibility they would be shut down longer if new cases developed here.

Missing Woman Is Found Dead in Eastern Branch

The body of Mrs. Lucille Braun, wife of Ralph Braun, 26, Navy Yard employe, reported missing from her home Sunday, was found yesterday floating in the Eastern Branch near the Washington Yacht Club. There was an abrasion on her head and one eye was discolored.

Police noted that the drowned woman fitted the description of Mrs. Braun, given in her husband's report of her disappearance. Braun was called and made the identification.

Braun told police his wife had recently undergone two operations. She left a note reading, "I can't stand the pain any longer." She had been confined to bed several days before her disappearance.

The body of the drowned woman was first seen by Lucius Barber, colored attendant at the Washington Yacht Club. He summoned the Harbor Police, who recovered the body.

Civic Leaders Praise Hecht Firm Foresight

New Parking Buildings Dedicated at Sixth and E Streets.

Civic leaders last night praised officials of the Hecht Co. for their foresight and spirit of service in building the new Hecht parking garage at Sixth and E streets northwest, first building of its kind in Washington, during ceremonies formally dedicating the new building.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic for the District, recalled the growth of traffic in Washington during the past four decades, and stated that "one answer to our growing traffic problem is in the erection of more buildings like this."

Oehmman Praised Design.
Col. John W. Oehmman, District Inspector of buildings, praised the unique design of the new structure for its "maximum use of available ground and maximum utility for patrons, with a minimum of hazard for those who will use it. He explained that the garage provides more than 60,000 square feet of space on an acre and a half, on one-third of an acre of land."

Maj. Edward Bowes, brought to the garage by remote radio control, congratulated the Hecht Co. for "foresight and enterprise in giving real service to the people of the city of Washington."

"The construction of this new building is an outstanding example of progressive scientific management, typical of the best in American merchandising," he said.

Alexander Hecht, president of the Hecht Co., recalled the growth of the city in the 41 years since the store was founded, and said, "it has been our desire to keep pace with the growth of the city."

2,500 at Ceremonies.
C. B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, presided at the ceremonies. George Quirk, vice president and store manager, described the garage as a "step forward" in the rendering of service to the people of Washington which is our aim.

Bert Sarazan, director of publicity, formally dedicated the new building "in a spirit of service to Washington and all its people."

More than 2,500 persons attended the ceremonies, and inspected the new cars on display at the garage. A separate display included personal trophies of Maj. Bowes, including keys to several cities, and many honorary police and fire company badges in cities throughout the country.

Sarazan said the garage would be open for business today, and that it would be able to take care of more than 1,200 cars a day.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acid and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 2 pints a day or about 50 cc. of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging headaches, rheumatic pains, hiccups, loss of "iron" and vitality, and aching swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the work of millions of kidneys.

Johnson Picked To Head Study On Aviation Bill

Committee to Report to Roosevelt After It Holds Parleys.

The Inter-Departmental Committee on Civil Aviation Legislation and Regulation held its first meeting yesterday and elected Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson chairman.

Secretary Roper said "the idea is that this committee will report to the President in memorandum form, or in the form of a bill, which will enable the President to properly present the matter to Congress at the next session."

Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, was appointed secretary of the committee, which decided to hold conferences during the month of October "with those interested in aviation legislation," before drafting its report and recommendation for submission to President Roosevelt.

It was also announced by the Commerce Department that contracts totaling $1,111,688 has been awarded in connection with its $5,000,000 airways improvement program.

WAKE UP!

Smitty's boss is asleep again—but he will wake up when Smitty tells him the good news! That good news is that this famous office boy and his equally famous boss will join the Sunday Post's all-star comic family next Sunday.

With them will be "Prince Valiant," of King Arthur's Court. Here's real adventure and color for you in this story of the glamorous days when Knighthood was in Flower.

"Smitty" and "Prince Valiant" will come to The Sunday Post with another group of adventurers—"Terry and the Pirates"—a story of thrills and fun with Pat, Terry and Connie in the Orient. "Terry and the Pirates," appearing daily and Sunday, can be found today on the comic page.

China Sufferers To Get $100,000 Red Cross Aid

Supplies, Hospital Equipment.

The American Red Cross will spend $100,000 for medical supplies and hospital equipment for use in war-torn China, Admiral Grayson, chairman, announced yesterday.

The supplies will go to the Chinese Red Cross Society, hospitals and other committees now caring for the sick and wounded. Appeals for aid, said Admiral Grayson, have come from relief agencies in China through the International Red Cross Committee of Geneva.

Although the Chinese Red Cross Society indicated there was a great need for medical aid, the Japanese Red Cross said it had sufficient supplies to meet requirements.

Appeals have stressed the need for aid among almost 300,000 refugees in the Shanghai area, many of whom have been stricken with plague, others injured and facing a shortage in medical supplies.

Several hospitals, it was said, have been forced to move their quarters and are attempting to function without adequate equipment.

A total of $30,000, said Admiral Grayson, previously had been granted by the Red Cross to aid American and other nationals in evacuating their families from China. Of this, $10,000 was expended by American diplomatic officials and $20,000 by the Philippine Red Cross in Manila, where 1,453 refugees sought shelter.

"Every dollar received from the American public for relief in China will be spent 100 per cent for that purpose," said Admiral Grayson.

In addition, he announced that the organization's 1938 convention will be held in San Francisco, May 2 to 5—the first time a national Red Cross convention has been held on the West Coast.

Takoma Park Eye Expert Joins Education Council

Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin of Takoma Park, Md., an eye specialist, has been appointed to the American Optometric Association's council of education, it was announced yesterday.

Other members of the council are Dr. Charles Sheard of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.; Dr. Ralph S. Minor of the University of California at Berkeley; Dr. Frederic A. Joll of Columbia University and Dr. Howard C. Doane of Boston.

AAA Fixes Prices In Peanut Control

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced yesterday a program designed to maintain peanut prices by diverting a portion of the crop to oil and by-products.

The program will operate principally in Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Texas.

Federal benefits will be paid for diverting peanuts from the normal channels of trade. The AAA fixed the following as pegging prices for diverted peanuts:

Virginia grade three or better, class A, $55 a ton; class B, $51; class C, $57 a ton.

Virginia growers will sell to the Virginia Peanut Growers Co-Operative at Suffolk.

Dr. Tead to Speak

The first lecture in the Administrative Management series to be offered under auspices of the Agriculture Graduate School will be given at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by Dr. Orville Tead, a director of Harpers & Brothers, and past president of the Society for the Advancement of Management. The sessions, ten in number, will be held in the Agriculture Auditorium.

The office of Dr. A. F. Woods, director of the school, yesterday announced an enrollment of approximately 150 for this particular course. Approximately 700 could be accommodated. The comparatively small number who have signed for the course was credited to a delay—an unavoidable one—in getting announcements distributed through the Government's departments.

The present course is more than an outgrowth of previous ones on personnel management and departmental objectives as offered by the school, Dr. Woods states. It is fashioned primarily for departmental executives, division chiefs, and other employees who wish to gain a better understanding of principles that will be applied to the governmental problems facing them. Speakers have been selected from professional, business, educational and governmental sources. Reservations for the series may be made by calling District 6350, extension 317.

Tournament

The Bureau of Mines is holding its annual fall golf tournament at the Indian Spring Golf Club today. Following medal play, contestants will be selected for two flights of match play. G. R. Hopkins is the present holder of the championship cup; F. M. Shore possesses the consolation trophy. Max Abel won the second flight championship, while H. H. Hughes emerged victorious in the medal play. Several golfers have joined the bureau during the past year and stiff competition is expected.

Goodbyes

Workers in the Department of Commerce will say goodbyes to three fellow employees today. These are Julia V. Battles (Census), 37 years, three months' service; Joseph W. Davis (Coast and Geodetic Survey), 31 years, eight months' service; and Fred Kopliger (Patent Office), 31 years, two months' service.

Interior Lodge, No. 35, A. F. G. E., will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening to discuss getting out of the A. F. G. E. It seems that one of the brothers returned from the Philadelphia convention, relating as how the A. F. G. E. "is no longer what it used to be."

FAT WOMEN SMOTHER IN TIGHT GIRDLES

Tight girdles and stiff foundation garments actually make many women look fatter, instead of slimmer. Why don't you try to get rid of it? Why not have a slim, lovely, youthful figure that needs no little girdle control?

Thousands of overweight women have found that the Marmola way is the easy way to get rid of extra fat. Just take 4 Marmola Prescription Tablets each day, and in place of starchy foods, eat potatoes and pastries, eat more salads, fruits, green vegetables, and go slow on fatty meats. That's simple, isn't it? Yet what a difference Marmola and this little change in your diet may make in your weight. Losses of 5 to 10 pounds a week have been reported in many cases from this simple, easy method of reducing. Marmola Prescription Tablets contain the same element prescribed by many doctors in treating their fat patients. Get a box of your druggist today and send that ugly fat on the way.

Princess Anne Physician, Ill, Believed to Have Killed Self.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., Sept. 29.—Dr. T. J. Smith filed a death certificate today declaring Dr. Catherine Lankford, 54-year-old physician of this city, took her own life.

Dr. Lankford's body, a bullet wound in the head, was found in her automobile last night. Her pistol was at her side.

Dr. Smith said she had been in ill health.

Dr. Lankford is survived by her husband, Dr. Henry M. Lankford, of Princess Anne; one son, Henry Jr., a student at Salisbury, Md., and a daughter, Catherine, a student in Baltimore.

Exports of Apples Expected to Gain

By the Associated Press.

Agriculture and Commerce department officials predicted yesterday a substantial increase in American apple exports this year as a result of bumper crops in the United States and generally lower production of the fruit abroad.

A. C. Edwards, associated economist of the Agriculture Department, said reports to the department indicate smaller crops in England, France and other European countries with the exception of The Netherlands.

The Commerce Department foodstuffs division reported 1936 exports amounted to 8,896,735 bushels. Although this was less than the 1935 exports, it represented 13.7 per cent of the 1936 commercial crop, as against 12.4 per cent exported in 1935 and 13.7 per cent in 1934.

Edwards predicted 1937 exports might total 15,000,000 bushels if favorable factors continue in foreign markets.

LaGuardia Supporters Arrange Voter Train

The Fusioners, a non-partisan organization of New Yorkers campaigning for the reelection of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, opened offices yesterday at 1406 G street northwest, with Irving Nussbaum in charge.

The organization has arranged for a special registration train for New York City voters to leave Washington at 1:20 p. m. Oct. 9. The registration period expires at 10:30 p. m. that day. Round-trip tickets costing $6.85 will be placed on sale today at the Fusioner headquarters.

"In view of the fact that the American Federation of Government Employees, by the actions of its national executive council and its recent convention in Philadelphia, is no longer an effective instrument for the organization of Government workers, and is pursuing activities and policies destructive of the unity and strength of unionism among Government employees, Lodge No. 35 hereby resolves to return its charter to the national executive council of the A. F. G. E."

A committee was then set afout to look further into all this. It is this committee which will deliver at the meeting tomorrow night.

DON'T FORGET the "Gay Nineties" program of the Agriculture Chorus gives in the auditorium tonight. Expecting the crowd the attraction always draws, the Chorus leaders say "come early."

American Oil Company Again makes Gas History with Greatest AMOCO-GAS

The history of America is the story of achievement. The story of men who dreamed great dreams... and then made these dreams come true.

This American Spirit, which made the U.S. the greatest nation in the world, has been one of the major factors in the success of the American Oil Company. This company revolutionized the automotive industry—made possible today's high compression motor—by introducing Amoco-Gas, the first and original special motor fuel.

Amoco-Gas, for years, has held more world's records than any other motor fuel. But science dreamed of an even greater Amoco-Gas. So we spent millions of dollars... new processes were invented and patented... new equipment perfected... the greatest and most modern refining unit in the world was made even more modern.

Result: the new Amoco-Gas is the greatest in our history! Literally, better than the world's best! Try it! You'll get a new driving thrill—and real economy!

Silence Is Golden.

Mr. Justice Black has come, been seen and kept his counsel. The only possible presumption is that he wants to make at least one long-distance telephone call before letting the country in on whatever secrets he may share with the Ku Klux Klan.

Mr. Black emphasizes his fear of being "misquoted" and intimates that he will speak later "so that the people can hear it and so that no part of the press can fall to print all that I have to say." In the embarrassing position in which the justice finds himself the press can afford to be tolerant at this attempt to pass the buck to journalistic shortcomings, real or imaginary.

It would seem that the former Senator cannot lay his hand on his heart and say simply, "I never belonged to the Klan." For if he could there is not a daily paper in the country that would fail to carry the denial, and not one of them which would misquote the statement. But of course there is some risk of confusion if the facts demand an explanation so long, labored and involved that it could not be committed to paper even during a leisurely transatlantic crossing.

And, after all, there is no rush about this statement which is so difficult to make. Protracted failure to deny or qualify the circumstantial charges is in fact a statement in itself. The country must be prepared for the possibility that Justice Black may never have anything to say on this issue.

There are certain circumstances in which silence is not merely golden but also virtually imperative. It doesn't need more legal experience than the justice has had to realize that.

But if, as and when Mr. Black asks his nominator for advice on the subject, it will, or would, be discreet for him not to use telegraphic forms. Some enterprising Senator, anxious to safeguard the public against encroachments of a secretive vested interest, might be so heartless as to subpoena the original of the communication. It has been done.

Expert Advice On The Courts.

For 15 years the Judicial Conference of Senior Circuit Court Judges has been meeting annually to analyze the work of the Federal courts and recommend changes designed to facilitate the administration of justice. Too often its advice has been ignored. Yet these careful findings and seasoned counsel have been available each year to anyone genuinely concerned with remedying the weaknesses of the judicial system.

The current recommendations of the conference have attracted unusual attention because of their sharp contrast with the reforms demanded by the Administration. After a thorough study of court records the conference finds need for 16 rather than 50 new judges. Of course, all of these would be appointed to circuit and district courts, since there is no congestion in the work of the Supreme Court. And since it is impossible to show any relationship between the age of judges and judicial delays, the age of incumbents would have no influence upon the assignment of the new appointees.

Despite this need for additional judges, the Federal courts have been steadily catching up with their back work. Sixty-eight out of 84 districts are now hearing cases soon after they are ready for trial. A few years ago only 31 districts were in that favorable position. There is a strong implication in the report that involuntary delay could be entirely eliminated from Federal court procedure with the appointment of 16 new judges. (And there is intimation that the present situation would be in even better case if the President had acted more promptly to fill existing vacancies instead of demanding new ones.)

No one is likely to deny that the judicial conference is the best qualified agency in the country to recommend court changes. Certainly no reasonable case could be made for the appointment of more judges than the judges themselves consider necessary. And when the men who are actually directing the courts are entirely satisfied with the present method of assigning judges to meet "temporary emergencies," the idea of a roving squad of judges can be dismissed as a useless as well as dangerous innovation.

The chief significance of the conference report at this time is that it confirms the wisdom of Congress in rejecting the Administration's judicial program and ordering a careful study of the courts' actual needs. Senate and House committees working in this field will find this document an invaluable aid to their investigations. In large measure their reports may be expected to re-echo the counsel which the judicial conference has given.

Constructive Planning.

President Roosevelt's devotion to the ideal of regional planning for more intelligent use of national resources is one of the happiest aspects of the New Deal. Neglect of co-ordinated activity in solving problems that extend beyond State lines has been extremely costly in the past and threatens to become even more costly in the future. If the Administration should succeed only in the development of machinery for such co-operative effort, it would earn the gratitude of present and future generations.

The kind of planning which President Roosevelt outlined in his speech at Bonneville Dam strikes an especially appealing note. His plea was for widespread distribution of industry, jobs and people. Despite his bow to the cities of the Pacific Northwest, his interest clearly lies in a diversion of industrial growth away from great congested centers into smaller communities, where costs are not pyramided and life is simpler.

The same note has been frequently sounded by the National Resources Committee. In its progress report issued more than a year ago it suggested "that diversification, decentralization of industry and regional self-sufficiency are desirable ends." "No region is likely to become excessively self-contained," the report continued, "but if extreme specialization can be overcome, the danger of sudden disaster from technological or business changes may be diminished."

Moreover, the President visualizes planning "from the ground up." He looks to local communities, counties and States to originate their own plans. Presumably the Federal Government would serve in the capacity of a co-ordinator, adviser and helper, especially in the financing of major regional undertakings. The National Resources Committee, working in co-operation with similar local agencies, has already made notable progress in this sort of planning.

Enthusiastic support for this type of planning may be anticipated from all parts of the country. As Mr. Roosevelt acknowledged, it is only when the people fear that the Federal Government intends to set up powerful agencies to control certain regions that opposition appears. Even in the matter of preserving their natural resources the citizens of each region want to be the masters and not the servants of governmental agencies.

It is not clear how the President's proposal to set up eight "little TVAs" in various parts of the country fits into this program of co-ordinated local planning. But there is a great deal of reassurance in the fact that the National Resources Committee is actually working out regional problems on the basis of local plans harmonized with the national interest. If the President is willing to proceed along these lines, as his Bonneville Dam address suggests, his emphasis upon planning will be truly significant.

Problems Of Crime Control.

The Brookings Institution has just published A. C. Mills' extremely thoughtful report on Crime Control by the National Government. Although the work of the chief Federal crime control agencies is examined in considerable detail, the study is not confined to a description of the administrative setup nor to extensive criticism of administrative defects. Its main purpose, as explained in a director's preface, is to set forth the "essentials of the national problem of crime control" in a detached fashion.

Reference to the fact that the "current interest in Federal activity seems to be largely concentrated on one or two well-advertised agencies" might possibly be interpreted as an implied criticism of the publicity campaign of the energetic head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. But the report itself appears on the whole to be markedly objective. Dr. Mills places great emphasis upon the fact that law enforcement is only one aspect of the much larger problem of crime control. That being the case, he has no doubt seen a danger in the type of advertising that measures achievement in terms of apprehension of criminals and number of convictions.

While there are occasional passing references to interdepartmental jealousies and lack of co-operation among Federal enforcement agencies, the report does not indicate that such friction is beyond the ordinary. Indeed, Dr. Mills pays tribute to the character and ability of the heads of all these organizations and suggests that regular meetings might further improve their relationships. Failing that, an advisory co-ordinating committee or a co-ordinator might be appointed to serve as intermediary.

The report rejects suggestions for a comprehensive general consolidation of the Government's chief crime-control agencies. However, it concludes that a centralization of general law-enforcement activities in the Department of Justice is logical "if it is the policy of the Federal Government to continue to view crime as a national problem, and in the future as in the recent past, to co-ordinate and assist, so far as possible, State and local law-enforcement agencies." Most assuredly, unless all signs fall, that is the policy we shall follow—a policy dictated by the breakdown of State and local law-enforcement agencies in trying to deal with certain types of crime.

As Dr. Mills points out, the territorial range of detection activities, to be effective, must be commensurate with the territorial range of crime. Unfortunately, kidnappers and other criminals are able by jumping into an automobile to take themselves speedily beyond the range of detection of local authorities. The Federal Government has been compelled to extend the range of its activities in the field of criminal law enforcement because of the relative helplessness of other agencies. Better centralization of law enforcement within the several States and interstate crime compact will be of great assistance, but they cannot fully make up for the shortcomings of divided responsibility.

Consequently, it is likely that we shall witness a further extension of Federal control under the interstate commerce, taxing and postal clauses of the Constitution. When this expansion of Federal activity aims directly to suppress crime as such and is designed to supplement or even supplant State and local activities, it creates a number of serious problems. Dr. Mills is more questioning than critical. He notes the tendency of the Federal Government to deal directly with local agencies and observes that most crimes are probably strictly local. Hence, while not denying the menace of interstate crime, he thinks the prior need with respect to the bulk of criminal law enforcement work is for administrative improvement within the States.

He also fears that too much emphasis is being placed currently upon crime enforcement under Federal direction and too little on the less spectacular task of crime prevention, where the role of the Federal agency is to assist and promote rather than control. These are rather nebulous suggestions, but they should serve to stimulate interest in the fundamental problems of fighting crime.

Olive Branches In Berlin.

With the eyes of the world upon them and the people of many nations listening to their words, Mussolini and Hitler at their Berlin love feast stressed their claim to be regarded as apostles of peace.

This is not an unusual role for either of the Fascist dictators. Both have frequently played it before—between spells of sabre-rattling. But coming jointly, and at this particular juncture in world affairs, the deliberate avoidance of provocative language is both welcome and significant. This is not less true because it reveals Germany and Italy on the defensive.

Behind the mutual admiration indulged in by Fuehrer and Duce it is not difficult to sense an inner uneasiness. And against the setting of basic differences and unresolved conflicts of policy between Fascist Italy and the Third Reich, those "avowals of common ideals and common interests" have a somewhat hollow ring.

It was Mussolini who let the cat out of the bag when he sought to illustrate the specific ways in which Italy and Germany are united. In the first place, he said, they have a common enemy in the Third International. Secondly, they "pursue the same policy in the economic sphere, a policy of economic autarchy." Thirdly, Germany and Italy are today "the greatest and soundest democracies which exist in the world." And, fourthly, Fuehrer and Duce are both determined on peace.

Now if the Berlin-Rome axis rests on these pivots, and these alone, it represents a far less stable and potent combination than is sometimes believed. Certainly, if a common desire for peace is an adequate cementing agent, the League of Nations should not be today the weak and incapacitated body it is. As for the claim that the regimes at Berlin and Rome represent the very opposite of triumphant democracy, it can be said that, even if it were true, the fact would nevertheless be meaningless.

The possession of a similar governmental structure no more makes for harmony of policy than a difference in government necessarily makes for conflict. And certainly the pressure on the dictators from the truly democratic powers is not active. Insofar as they constitute any threat to Nazism and Fascism it is to be found in the continued and successful operation of democratic institutions. Of course, as long as democracy survives elsewhere in Europe it represents to the people living under dictatorships an alternative to totalitarianism.

There remains, of Mussolini's four bonds of unity between Italy and Germany, only autarchy and anti-communism. Yet autarchy, by its very nature, is a factor that makes not for international harmony, but for conflict. To no small extent, it is the spread of economic nationalism, to be met with in its extreme form in the totalitarian states, that has brought the world to the brink of chaos. And anti-communism is little more than a red herring. In its present moribund state the Third International constitutes no real threat to any except its supporters, in Russia, who are in constant danger from Stalinist firing squads.

The secret of the Berlin speeches is probably that they reflect Hitler's and Mussolini's desire for a breathing spell to permit them to tide their countries over pressing difficulties of an imperative character. But whatever the cause, the circumstance that Italy and Germany are today talking peace places a grave responsibility on the shoulders of democratic statesmen. This may well be the psychological moment for constructive action on their part to consolidate peace in Europe. It is no time to reject an olive branch, no matter what hand extends it.

Letters to the Editor

Criminals For Guinea Pigs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A "voice crying in the wilderness," but a voice nevertheless against vivisection—and a reply to Fay Weissberg.

Science must be served but not at the expense of untold suffering of helpless dumb creatures. And I soon hope to see the proper legislation passed to prevent further torture to such.

Every day the papers carry stories of murders and vicious sex crimes against tiny children. Every day we see where this one or that one has been sentenced to death for some brutal crime. We either condemn them to death or give them life or what would be practically life. Time marches on and in time the latter class are paroled and thrown back into society. In almost every case of the sex criminal or murderer he is a paroled convict—set free by some soft-hearted board of parole and influence brings a quicker condoning.

Why not use the worthless bodies of criminals to advance science and help mankind? God knows that is the only way they can serve any good purpose. There is no earthy reason why overburdened taxpayers should support a vast army of criminals in institutions that teach them more crime, if possible.

Great laboratories—centrally located—the living bodies of those who have forfeited their right to live or dwell among men, and science will go forth to greater heights than ever before and those as for hungry children and those

The Open Forum.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having attended at various times the past several years the interesting and educational discussions conducted by the Washington Open Forum, I trust that this broad-minded organization will continue this fall and winter to give the public similar service.

The speakers be they conservative, liberal or radical, are listened to tolerantly by the audiences and later questions are asked of them as to their views. The organization takes no sides but gives all a hearing. This results in much intellectual benefit to the people attending the meetings. Economics and social questions are discussed, pro and con.

It is surely a tolerant, progressive, truth-seeking organization. WASHINGTON, SEPT. 29.

Comment On Mr. Justice Black.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What's all the hullabaloo about Black and the Klan and the court? Everybody who's known anything about politics for the past ten years and knew that Black either was or had been a Klansman. Did the President know it? Sure. He knows as much—and maybe more—about politics than the next man. So what? He didn't put Black on the bench to wear a white robe and hood and brandish a torch, did he? He put him on the bench to be the first of the "Roosevelt judges."

Black was no great shakes as a lawyer, but he was a darn good Roosevelt judge. He voted right the way Roosevelt told him to vote—almost every time. All he's going to do on the Supreme Court is to vote right. Again, so what? Remembering the large Jewish, Catholic and Negro vote in some parts of the country, do you think Mr. Roosevelt is going to tell him to vote against Negroes, Jews and Roman Catholics who came up before the Court? As smart a politician as Mr. Roosevelt? Don't be silly!

Mr. Justice Black will do all right on the Supreme Court. Mr. Roosevelt will see to that. M. I. B. Washington, Sept. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is widespread condemnation of President Roosevelt and Attorney General Cummings because they did not examine into Senator Black's Ku Klux affiliation before his appointment and confirmation. It goes without saying that no one whose group is the objective of Ku Klux persecution can have any sympathy or tolerance for the advancement of a member of that order to the Supreme Court, but this is wholly aside from the merit of the question at issue. The President is simply justified in selecting any Senator who has been in the public eye for a decade and has met the practical test of probity and devotion to the public service on the basis of his present work and worth and general reputation without inquiring too minutely into his private and personal record. If the President were required to institute an investigation into the life of every citizen whom he deemed to appoint to high public place concerning everything that he ever did from youth up, the best of them

Labor and Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Once again I must take issue with an editorial appearing in your paper and at the same time express my appreciation to you for your fairness in publishing my previous criticisms. The editorial in question this time is that appearing in your issue of September 28, under the heading "Communism and the C. I. O."

The Communists and their allies are the ones who have been adopting an opportunistic policy for many years and never missing an opportunity. The Communists do not join our labor unions or any other American organizations for the purposes of being won over to the conservative elements in these organizations, or to Americanism. In most instances they are assigned by the party hierarchy of Moscow to join such American organizations.

We have in our possession an absolutely authentic chart of Communist activities in one American city, which is typical of their policy in every large community of the country. This chart shows that the Communists through their infiltration process have succeeded in gaining representation in no less than 250 American organizations in that particular community. Anyone knowing anything about the Communist program and their policy knows that this is one of their main objectives and through it they have threatened to ruin our entire organized labor movement.

You stated that "in other countries where radical political groups follow the opportunistic policy of co-operating with other parties to attain immediate, though limited, objectives, they speedily become more moderate in their outlook and less violent in their demands." This policy is one of the main strategies of the Communists to fool the people and although far from commendable they are successful. Gregory Zinoviev, President of the Third International and long a high official in the Communist party of the Soviet government, enunciated this policy by saying, "of course, it is very important how your propaganda is conducted; whether it is done shrewdly or crudely." This is one of our greatest dangers of the present movement.

The American people generally should most heartily commend the officers of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor for their courageous stand in denouncing traitorous Communists whose sole aim is to overthrow our Government, destroy our liberties and our religious freedom.

Federal purchases of commodities to stabilize the market, while at the same time permitting the sale of the same type of merchandise in Government stores at "cut prices" due to the evasion of ordinary business overhead such as rent, insurance, licenses and taxes, is ridiculous.

A corporation with nearly two million of Government funds aims to sell for less while another agency of the Government buys the same type of product on the open market to boost prices. The result is destroyed confidence and retarded recovery.

Thanks to Secretary Morgenthau, the sale of butter in the Treasury will end October 1. Who will pay the gross sales tax on the butter sold in his department last year?

Taxation without representation is unfair as is competition without taxation. FAIRFAX OYSTER, Washington, Sept. 27.

Contradictory Policies.

Father Of The Fish Commission.

IN Oak Hill Cemetery, Georgetown, on an elevation overlooking Rock Creek, stands a granite vault bearing the name of "Baird." There is nothing particularly ornate about this final resting place. The exterior is not streamlined. An observer might conclude an attempt had been made by the tomb designer, in the finished work, to focus the simplicity of nature of the man whose life activities centered the foundation for Washington's first fish commission—Spencer Fullerton Baird, zoologist and protégé of Audubon.

He was a native of Reading, Pa., and on a downtown building in that city a bronze plaque records, briefly, his major achievements, among them "Father of the United States Fish Commission."

Sixty-four years encompassed the life of Prof. Baird. This period viewed retrospectively in cycles, decades, or scores, reveals and exemplifies what an individual may do usefully when the will is set decidedly to accomplish the worth while.

He possessed a passion for natural history. Fields, woods, streams and ponds offered a peculiarly rich nature fauna, while the regional limestone, surrounding Carlisle, Pa., his college grounds, carried many interesting fossils. From extended rambles over the countryside, as a boy, he would return laden with specimens of birds and beasts to be preserved and studied. Vacations he devoted largely to collecting excursions, to visiting all zoological workers, and museums within reach, or to copying zoological descriptions and plates from books he could not himself own.

At 13 years of age, he was a collegian; at 17, a graduate; at 23, a professor of natural history; at 27, an assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and at 33, its second secretary. The first grant made by this institution for scientific exploration was in 1848—"to Spencer F. Baird, of Carlisle, for the exploration of the bone caves and study of the local natural history of southeastern Pennsylvania."

An appraiser of that period said of him: "He pre-eminently qualified for his work in the Smithsonian and stood head and shoulders above any scientist of his time in his particular field." By another it was said "He transferred every military post into a station of research, all Indian campaigns into a scientific expedition."

The zealous desire to do for others, for mankind, for science progressive, did not admit of an armistice with him at any time. Unbroken, in the seething intensity of purpose, were his efforts to discover, co-ordinate and acquire some of the many secrets which nature holds elusive from the noninquisitive. He loved scientific phenomena in all manifestations—their mysteries and rewards. He was a prolific contributor to literature of his class and the number of contributions recorded to his credit at the close of 1882 was 1,683.

Another stage of Baird's career was ushered in when President Grant asked him to head the United States Commission of Fish and Fisheries—March 8, 1871. Purpose then was to investigate the cause of the alleged diminution of the fishes of the country and carry on the work of increasing the supply of food fishes in the waters belonging to the United States. For more than ten years, when Congress was deaf to his pleadings for funds, he continued his experiments and investigations from private sources. In this capacity he served for 16 years.

While the national Legislature eventually provided money for biological research regarding food fishes, Prof. Baird found himself without official shelter. Hence he had to set aside a part of his residence, then at No. 918 New York avenue, as a marine laboratory.

It was not long, however, before Prof. Baird's miniature fish museum on New York avenue became overcrowded. In 1876, when he built a large home for his family at 1445 Massachusetts avenue, he assigned space in it for the infant fish commission. Here it remained for several years or, until the house next door, No. 1443, was erected. The commission was subsequently moved into the old armory, then at Sixth and B streets southwest, where it remained until about 1932, when it acquired its present palatial quarters in the Department of Commerce Building.

At the time of his death he had established at Woods Hole, Mass., the largest biological laboratory in the world, regarded as "the lineal descendant of Agassiz's famous school at Penikese." Buzzards Bay, Mass.

While an inherited son of the City of Washington, he became one of its representative citizens and left, as a priceless heritage, the nucleus of what has become a marine museum of untold delight to youngsters and a biological laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., where ichthyologists may play the game of research, exhaustively and perseveringly, for public well.

Day Dreaming.

IN DISCUSSING the operations of the British football pools, the equivalent of the American numbers racket, I am day-dreaming about the money-raising possibilities of some similar scheme operated on a national scale and with exclusive rights by the United States Government.

Dealing to a regular clientele of about 6,000,000, the British pools, in a season of nine months, handle from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000. Like the underworld promoters of numbers racket, they find it profitable to take candy money bets. Their minimum is an English penny, or 2 cents of our money, and the numbers racketeers who do business in most of our big cities and in many smaller ones will accept a one cent bet. There have been many estimates of the amount handled by the numbers racketeers, but none of them is worth considering because they all are founded on gossip and guess. Nevertheless, the pools and the American racketeers demonstrate that it is possible to handle with profit wagers so small as to seem not worth the bother. Perhaps the racket should be eliminated from consideration in this respect, because they are very informal and keep no records. The British pools, however, are now conducted in a businesslike way, and they still invite 2-cent bets, and apparently treat them as seriously as bets of a pound or more.

IN THIS COUNTRY the volume obviously would be much greater. An estimate of a billion a year as the total handle seems very conservative, but even on that volume a 10 per cent rakeoff for the operator, which would be the Government, would yield $100,000,000 for the Treasury. It might, and probably would be, considerably more. Moreover, if the Government possessed an exclusive legal monopoly, the criminal nuisance of the numbers racket would diminish greatly, if it did not entirely vanish. The customers would feel confident of the Government pool and the authority of the Government would be invoked to suppress unlawful, wildcat competition. The racket is now a local police matter.

The more substantial British operators claim to conduct their pools with an operating expense of no more than 15 per cent of the gross, and a similar enterprise under Government management here could be handled with the same efficiency and at no greater proportionate cost. Of course it might not be, considering the necessities of the relatives and friends of Deserving Democrats, but if you don't like my day-dream please go away and dream one of your own. I do not wish to be waked up.

Instinctively the objection arises that the United States Government must never become a party to a gambling operation. But many of our State governments already are in the business, taking a percentage of the pari-mutuel turnover at the race tracks, and the Federal Government, even now, through the income tax, not only accepts with pleasure and without compunction the legal percentage of gambling winnings, but even demands, under the law, a fair divvy of the profits of swindlers, racketeers and, if it comes to that, brothel keepers.

AND, IF A TECHNICAL distinction having a faint color of morality will help the national conscience in this matter of the pool the fact is that the Government must be no party to the betting. The pool is a pari-mutuel device in which the customers bet against the probabilities and each other, while the operator serving merely as broker. He takes down his cut for his profit, deducts the actual expenses of operation, and divides the rest of the money among those who have guessed right.

The winning odds in a squarely conducted mutual of this type are enormous, but the individual losses might not be harmful if bets of a nickel were acceptable. And 10 per cent of a billion-dollar handle is $100,000,000 a year for the national kitty. Do I hear anyone sneering at a hundred millions a year even in these days of box-car figures?

The Farley-Eight.

The rumor that Big Jim Farley will soon leave the Cabinet for a job as a lobbyist is now practically confirmed.

The Postmaster General will make the switch "as soon as refinancing of the company on a large scale can be completed." Is this an intimation that a souvenir booklet is to go with every car?

Mr. Farley won't formally announce his decision to change machines in midstream, but everybody expects it any day now.

It all goes to show the tendency to produce autos with new friends.

Jim will trade in the Postmaster Generalship for the new car, but he will continue to handle his Franklin in all moods, attitudes and temperatures.

He will not resign as National Chairman or even switch to the rumble seat.

His favorite will continue to be the Hyde Park De Luxe Flyer, and in his opinion there will never be another model like it.

Jim has only one real worry. That comes when he thinks of his reception when he tries to sell a car to a Tory, an invested interest or any of the Macaulays.

Anybody who thinks he is a green hand in the auto business is crazy. He made America take a new model with practically no brakes and like it, didn't he?

There's no telling how far the Pierce-Arrow may go with Big Jim at the wheel. He may even land it in the Senate.

Suggestions for slogans are in order. How about "The Car for Which Big Jim Turned in a Cabinet Office"?

Good luck, James! And don't try to sell one to Al Smith, Alf Landon or John Hamilton.

Nutrition Study

League Committee Of Experts, Headed By Lord Astor, Issues Significant Report Dealing With Problem Of Food And Its Uses.

By C. Poznanski.

GENEVA.

ONE OF the least spectacular, but one of the most important items on the agenda of the League Assembly is the final report of the Mixed Committee of the League of Nations on the relation of nutrition to health, agriculture, and economic policy.

This report has just appeared in print. It is a large volume of 360 pages, the perusal of which is more interesting than that of many novels.

The mixed committee, consisting of agricultural, economic and health experts, was set up under a resolution of the sixteenth assembly in 1935 to study the nutrition problem from the point of view both of health and economics.

The initiative of this resolution was given by the delegate of Australia, M. Bruce. If one reverts to the speech of M. Bruce, one will find that his main object was to find ways to bring about a larger consumption of agricultural products.

However, during the studies of the mixed committee this original problem was almost lost to view. Under the influence of the health experts the emphasis shifted from the problem of undernourishment to that of malnutrition, and the report is mainly a compendium of the new nutrition science, to use an expression coined by the American experts.

Emphasis Is Now On Protective Foods.

THE OLD nutrition schemes operated simply in terms of calories, the essence of the new nutrition science is the distinction between foods which are simply "energy bearing" and those which have "protective" value. I. e. foods valuable for providing minerals, vitamins and "good protein."

This means that a diet amply providing the necessary calories may nevertheless be ruinous to the health if these calories are provided exclusively by energy bearing foods. It means that socially the problem of malnutrition is an important, if not more important, than that of undernourishment. Let us quote simply one example from the report: In 1921 in a city of the United States, out of 6,015 children of pre-school age, 90 per cent were found to be receiving an inadequate diet according to current standards.

The basis of the report is thus of a scientific nature. The consequences are nevertheless of a great economic importance. The report insists on the optimum nutrition, not on minimum nutrition. And it is these economic consequences which I should like to stress.

Changes in food consumption mean changes in agriculture; some of them are enormous. The report indicates that a challenge to vested interests in the production of certain foods, which are to be replaced by others. The report cautions that the introduction of sugar into the diet is to be feared by the adoption of the new nutrition schemes, because if undernourishment is abolished the actual supply of even of the foods which are to be replaced will still be hardly sufficient. Nevertheless, "ere were outside the committee and even in the committee itself bitter fights, because the representatives of certain interests realized a certain danger in the proposals of the committee.

Fight Went On Behind Scenes.

LET US QUOTE at random a few examples to illustrate this point.

The first is perhaps the most important, an example in which the fight of vested interests behind the scene was the hardest, that of sugar. The report states: "Refined sugar, like highly milled cereal products, provides energy without any protective elements. An excessive proportion of sugar in the diet is especially bad for children, whose instinct to eat it seems altogether out of proportion to its nutritional value, since it occupies the place which should be filled by protective foods." "The introduction of sugar into the diet is to be feared by the remote districts has been followed by the occurrence of dental disease previously unknown."

It is easy to grasp that if the new diet becomes a reality, cane plantations and sugar factories will hardly profit. The second example is "potato vs. flour." Already in the quotations above we find hardy flour put more or less on the same standing as sugar. The committee advises the substitution to a large extent of potatoes for white flour. It says: "Special attention is called to the value of the potato as a food rich in calories which is particularly suited as a substitute for sugar and cereals in the modern European diet."

If one realizes that in European countries the potato is a home grown product, while immense quantities of white flour are imported from overseas, it is easy to grasp that this resolution contains in itself a very serious economic revolution.

Incidentally the question of flour led to a dramatic intervention by the French representative on the committee. The committee insists that highly milled white flour has infinitely less nutritive value than flour which contains the husk and the grain.

National Habits
Are Questioned.

THE REPRESENTATIVE of France took it as a reflection on the French national diet, mainly based on very white bread and insisted on omitting this "offense" from the report.

The same thing may be said about the passages in the report which affirm that fruit jams have much less protective value than fresh fruit.

Finally there is a very serious economic problem in the emphasis laid by the report on the absolute necessity of increasing milk consumption. Milk for the authors of the report is "the nearest approach we possess to a perfect and complete food, and no other food is known that can be used as a substitute."

The report gives quite impressive data to corroborate this statement. Thus disinterested studies of doctors and hygienists may, through the action of the League, become an element in important economic changes.

The more so, as one must stress another distinctive feature of the report, which also constitutes a new revolutionary principle. Having analyzed the problem of malnutrition, the experts were unanimous in recognizing its importance as a social problem and therefore in asking for the intervention of governments into what till now was considered a purely domestic affair, i. e. how the money spent on food is to be distributed between the various foods.

"Malnutrition, especially in children, affects not only physical health, but also mental development," states the report and for its authors the intervention of the state in nutrition problems was as important as justified as compulsory education.

Let us give, without comment, some more quotations:

"For nutrition policy to be effective, the problem must be recognized as one of primary national importance."

"It lies with governments, supported by enlightened public opinion to take the lead. There is no country in which conditions could not be improved with more government help and direction; there is no country in which further measures to improve the nutritional public opinion are not imperative."

Creation Of Nutrition Committees Is Urged.

THE REPORT recommends the creation of national nutrition committees, which, incidentally, were already created in some countries on the basis of the interim reports. But "one essential condition for this seems to be that they should be incorporated in the state administrative organization." And "the ultimate responsibility for the nutrition and health policy of a nation must rest with that nation's government."

To appreciate fully the importance of these statements one must remember that the committee was not a committee of politicians of the left, but a committee of independent scientists, high government officials, representatives of big land-lords, mostly conservative, and that its president was a man as little revolutionary as Lord Astor.

The committee drafted a whole series of resolutions intended to promote the bringing into life of the new nutrition schemes. No doubt these recommendations will be adopted by the League Assembly. And no doubt also that the voting of these recommendations will be only a first step.

The profound meaning of the work of the committee and of the league resolutions will be that the problem of nutrition will definitely take on the status of a problem no longer confined to the four walls of each household, but will become a national and international problem of paramount importance.

Ideal Partners

By Barnet Nover

Beyond The Berlin Speeches.

THERE WAS A passage in Hitler's speech of Tuesday which, without intending to do so, blew away the gauzy structure of pretense surrounding the Berlin-Rome axis and revealed the Fascist entente as a distinctly feeble affair.

"Every attempt," said the Fuehrer, "to interfere with the understanding between the two nations or to play one up against the other by casting suspicion and by obscuring the real aims in order to dissolve the ideal partnership will be of no avail because of the innermost desire of one hundred fifteen million people who are united at the manifestation of this very hour, and because of the determination of the two men who are standing here to address you."

THE OBVIOUS intention behind this statement was not only to warn the powers that they would get nowhere in any attempt to drive a wedge between the Fascist dictatorships but also to reassure Italy of Germany's good faith. For that they are not easily reassured. Mussolini needs to be reassured. At the moment he appears to need Germany somewhat more than Germany needs Italy. Which helps explain why, in the first place, he took the trouble to visit the Reich at this time and why, in the speech made in Berlin, he was far more ardent in his expression of friendship toward Germany than Hitler was in expressing friendship for Italy.

There was, to be sure, no lack of cordiality in Hitler's remarks. But they were couched in language so guarded and so full of ifs and buts that they were of little use. Hitler spoke gratefully of Italy's friendship during the 15 years between the Armistice and the establishment in Germany of the Nazi regime. But such international friendships, as everyone knows, are very tender plants. They wither easily. During those 15 years Hitler might have mentioned, but for obvious reasons did not, that Germany's best friend and supporter was not Italy but Russia. Where is Russo-German friendship now?

IT IS not friendship but a community of interests that compels nations to work together. And that community of interests does not, broadly speaking, exist in the case of Germany and Italy.

Those major aims which Germany pursues and which are shared by Italy are the return of the colonies, the inclusion of Austria in the Third Reich, the acquisition of the wheat, oil and minerals of the Ukraine, with the threat of Czechoslovakia as a by-product of this thrust to the east—can only be achieved through war. And in no case is it to Italy's interests to advance the achievement of those objectives. For the greater Germany becomes the weaker Italy. Power among nations is relative.

This Mussolini, disciple of Machiavelli, knows full well. But recent developments have placed him in a pocket.

SINCE the anti-piracy parley, Great Britain and France have made it clear that they are not inclined to press the advantage then secured. They have revealed a willingness to make Italy a real partner in the enterprise but not the dominant partner. And now they appear to be preparing to take the logical next step and to press for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain.

As long as the Spanish civil war continues to be a war international in scope the Mediterranean problem cannot permanently be solved. There will always be a temptation for Italy or for Italy and Germany to combine to protect their interests in the insurgent cause. And if the war continues to remain a stalemate there will always be the urge for the Fascist powers to seek a speedy victory by the blockade route.

At Geneva the Spanish government delegates made a powerful plea for direct action to the loyalists. That plea has temporarily been shelved. But the very circumstance that the issue has been raised has helped force the hands of France and Great Britain.

THE CHATEAUX government is in no one too secure a position. Its position might become uncertain in the extreme, once parliament reconvenes, should Italy proceed to send large additional forces to Spain. Hence the efforts to Yvon Delbois, the French foreign minister, to get from Italy assurances that no such step is being considered. Hence, also, his threat that if Italy extends its intervention on Franco's behalf France will open its borders.

In Italy the regimented press declares this is a bluff. But it is a bluff which Mussolini can hardly afford to ignore. Yet at the same time, he is unwilling to abandon Franco to his own devices, realizing, no doubt, that if that were done it would be only a matter of time before the insurgent movement would blow up.

On the horns of a dilemma Mussolini has naturally turned to Hitler. He is full of enthusiasm for the Berlin-Rome axis. He is full of hate for Hitler's pet hate—bolshivism. Yet Italy was the first major power other than Germany to restore normal relations with the Soviet Union and for years maintained the friendliest relations with that land.

To be sure, Russia's astute handling of the submarine issue was responsible for the most serious rebuff Mussolini has received since Guadalajara. But that alone does not explain the Duce's accentuated ardor as an apostle of anti-communism. His conversion to that cause is political, not emotional.

Quite possibly he may have persuaded Hitler during the recent meetings in Germany that the Spanish gamble is worth another stack of German chips. If so he may have to pay a very great price for that continued collaboration on Franco's behalf. And even then a strong stand by the democratic powers may frighten off Hitler whose enthusiasm for the Spanish venture has never been as great as Mussolini's.

The meeting of Hitler and Mussolini was a great spectacle. But what other significance it has remains very much in doubt. In diplomacy there is a big gap between courtesy and marriage.

Subjective Poetry
By William Lyon Phelps

This is the original title of a new book, prepared for our delectation by Tom Boggs, and published by the Macmillan Co., New York.

The introduction by the editor is provocative and entertaining. It gives him a fine opportunity to attack poets and poetry and public taste, when all he really wants to do is to give the reader an opportunity to see forth his views of the true lyric. He has fine taste and a discerning mind.

A lyric poem should have three qualities; it should be brief, it should be musical, it should express the mood of the author when he wrote it. Not his character, not his opinions, not his temperament, but his mood when he wrote it.

The drama is the most objective form of poetry and the lyric the most subjective. However, Mrs. Browning (no favorite of Mr. Boggs) invented the term "dramatic lyric," used with such genius by her great husband. A dramatic lyric is short and musical; it expresses not the writer's mood, but the mood of some person real or imaginary.

There are no dramatic lyrics in this volume; these are the pure article. And the editor has taken pains to select poems that have not appeared in anthologies and are not familiar. He has thus brought to our attention old and new songs, many of them of arresting beauty.

Of the 51 lyrics, 41 were unfamiliar to me.

Philatelic Errors

One of Nicaragua's new stamp issues is engraved with a map of the country drawn in such a manner as to include a generous slice of Honduras. The postage stamp has fanned patriotic fires in Honduras and there are threats of war. If the worst comes, Nicaragua can't say it wasn't warned.

Shortly after the turn of the century the Congress of the United States was all set to approve the construction of a canal across Nicaragua. The small republic chose that moment to issue a stamp showing Matombó—the great volcano alongside the proposed canal route—in the act of erupting. Although Matombó hadn't peeped a peep in centuries, the opposition to the Nicaraguan route sent copies of the stamp to our lawmakers. Sentiment turned and Panama got the canal.

Tom McCarthy

Attends the Trial of a Fresh-Bore G. U.'s Sophomore Vigilantes.

"GENTLEMEN, I beg of you to observe the shape of his nose," said the defense attorney. "If justice is to be done, I ask you to return a verdict of—"

"Adenoids," said Mr. Ferguson.

"Derogatory—and irrelevant," said the judge, then his eye fastened on me.

"If the gentleman from the press doesn't stop fraternizing with the prisoners at the bar, he is likely to be exterminated."

After that warning I kept pretty quiet. Unquestionably, my sympathies were with the Georgetown Freshmen, being tried at the court of the Vigilance Committee. However, I was not minded to argue with 50 Sophomores, who shouted "Guilty" even before the charge was read.

I didn't know but what Carl Watson, head of the Vigilance Committee and chief judge of the Sophomore Court, had seen me on N street when the Freshmen plotted their revolt against tradition. He might have seen me at the very moment when the clustered Freshmen announced that they had a "machine" candidate for class elections consecrated to the downfall of all Sophomores.

I wasn't sure that he hadn't been lurking around some corner when, for my benefit, the Freshmen had sung the praises of the leader who would bring them to the promised land, beyond the domination of upper classmen.

The song the Hilltop Freshmen sang was a pretty good one, even if it did take a few liberties with rhyme and meter—

"Joe Louis Eckenrode—he's our man by choice—
With Joe Louis Eckenrode we'll come out foist!"

But I had no way of knowing that the Sophomore Vigilance Committee hadn't been lurking in the background at the informal songfest. Therefore I stopped talking with the Freshman prisoner at the bar . . . and listened to the case.

"THIS YOUNGSTER," said the Sophomore appointed as defense attorney for the Freshman, "has been accused of being sarcastic. I disclaim it. I reject it. I disavow it."

"Boo," said the Sophomores in Georgetown's historic Philodemic Room.

"I want to prove—" said the advocate.

About that time the judge rapped for order and Daniel Ferguson, of Shenandoah, Pa., the prisoner at the bar, leaned over and said, "It's a lie!"

The court procedure wasn't running with real smoothness, but nobody seemed to care. It was the first court session for the year 1937 of the Sophomore Vigilance Committee at Georgetown University.

"You," said Carl Watson, Chief Judge and head of the Vigilance Committee, "will take the stand." He pointed to the aforesaid Daniel Ferguson, who had busied himself during the production of evidence by whispering "It's a lie!"

Daniel Ferguson, clutching his Freshman cap of blue and gray, took the stand.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

It's amazing what an imposing turnout of Washington celebrities can be lassoed on short notice for a party if the news gets out (amid a crisis) that free drinks and free hors d'oeuvres are on the program. . . . This is, in all fairness, doubly true if there's a chance that the celebrities will see (and be seen by) other celebrities.

A high-powered press agent arranged a cocktail party without much warning the other day, and drew two Cabinet members, Senator Borah, Jesse Jones, of the RFC, plus a bevy of the Capital's partless beauties and heads of young diplomats and officials.

It wasn't the refreshments that lured the elder statesmen; it was their pictures in a newspaper, the piece de resistance. . . . Wasn't it the illustrious Senator Brookhart, who set the precedent that a host's highballs don't influence a statesman's views—especially if he doesn't drink them? . . . I'll wager that Justice Black has become so edgy about Klan robes that he doesn't even wear a nightgown any more when he sleeps, for fear someone will misunderstand.

—the expectant people

A Washingtonian who needs a breathing spell while showing the sights to guests from the hinterland ought to take them to Meridian Park, the American version of the hanging gardens of Babylon, with its ladder of pools. . . . I have examined carefully Jose Clara's statue called "Serenity" and if that is serene then Peggy Joyce is a nun.

When Senator Wheeler runs short of things to investigate, I suggest he investigate the fender-denting conspiracy by a few daredevil, untrammeled Washington taxi drivers. . . . An innocent motorist whose fenders are smashed by these gentlemen has as much chance of collecting as Mr. Morgenthau has of collecting the French and Italian war debts.

One motorist whose car was crumpled $26 worth complains that the taxi claim agent is giving him the stony eye, with affidavits from the taxi driver's passenger and another taxi driver (!) that it was the motorist's fault. The claim agent's attitude is "All right, sue me!" Maybe the automobile clubs should handle such suits for motorists.

Some of our statesmen prefer to tell their whole story over the radio, rather than to risk "misquotation or partial publication" in the press. . . . Well, inevitably, that must lead to a new radio attachment to sieve out the soft soap, side-stepping, baloney and demagoguery that go so smoothly into the mike. . . . Also, a microphone can't ask questions or talk back.

—if that gal is serene

Probably Washington is the only town where the schoolgirls are so sophisticated and the debutantes so naive that the sight of girls roller skating on sidewalks and smoking cigarettes simultaneously is a commonplace.

One of President's favorite phrases lately has been "What the people expect" of their Government. . . . Well, it seems to me that there's no limit to what some people might expect of their Government—such as removing children from their eyes, holding their babies, balancing the check books, improving wife's cooking, doing their algebra lessons, or getting them a date with the blonde in the next apartment.

I, for example, am merely one of the people, with only a moderately developed sense of expectancy. . . . What's more, I am a staunch supporter of Mr. Roosevelt. . . . Yet after giving the matter only a few moments thought I expect that the Government should make reading of this column compulsory; that every Government employee in Washington should send me amusing anecdotes to print, thus lightening my aspect; that other columnists study and report on the five oldest churches in St. Marys County, Members are Mrs. Edward Thomas, Mrs. Sally Coates, Mrs. Fred Court.

Committee Named.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 28.—Mrs. Aubrey Gardiner, president of the Rural Women's Clubs of St. Marys County, has appointed a committee to study and report on the five oldest churches in St. Marys County. Members are Mrs. Edward Thomas, Mrs. Sally Coates, Mrs. Fred Court.

Sheen Rakes Communism In Talk Here

Catholic Orator Says Family, 'Not Worker,' Is Social Unit.

Catholic Convention Condemns Birth Control in Resolution.

In a slashing attack on communism, the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, last night denounced the philosophy that glorifies the worker rather than the family as the unit of society.

Mr. Sheen, one of the most famous orators in the Catholic Church, spoke at a banquet in the Mayflower Hotel which brought to a close the seventeenth annual convention of the National Council of Catholic Women.

"The unit of society," he said, "is not the worker with the hammer and the sickle, but the woman with the cradle—the family. . . . The level of any civilization is the level of its womanhood."

Birth Control Scored.

"We salute you," Mr. Sheen said, addressing the 400 delegates, "not as modern women; we salute you as Christian women."

At its afternoon session, the convention adopted this resolution: "That the pseudo-scientific principles offered to women to deny the God-given right of co-creatorship and to set at naught his choicest blessing be condemned. . . . as pernicious, injurious to health and body and destructive to peace of conscience, degrading to the purity of womanhood and unworthy of Christian women."

The committee authorized a campaign against "sale and distribution of all salacious literature," which members said is being dispensed to high school children as well as adults. It also condemned "lurid" newspaper advertising in connection with motion pictures.

Miss Katherine E. Williams, of Milwaukee, was re-elected national president.

Gold Medal Awarded.

At last night's banquet, Mrs. Frank Jettinoff, national secretary of Theta Phi Alpha, awarded a gold medal to Miss Agnes G. Regan, acting director of the National Catholic School of Social Service, as the "outstanding Catholic woman of the year."

Among others who spoke were Louis Kennedy, president of the National Council of Catholic Men; W. I. Plant, state deputy of the Knights of Columbus; Franklin Dunham, educational director of the National Broadcasting Co.; Miss Florence Boland, of the Catholic Women's League of Canada; Dr. Maud Loeber, of New Orleans, La.; Mrs. Curran L. Jones, of Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. Margaret H. Brandeau, of Nashville, Tenn.; and Mrs. Lucian R. Carroll, of Houston, Tex.

Soldier in Motor Rides Car Tracks On Torn Up Street

The torn up street track at Fourteenth and F streets is no place for an automobile, Capt. George R. Burgess, U. S. A., learned last night when he followed a trolley blithely along the right of way from which all paving had been removed. Someone shouted at him, he looked back, and the tires, which had been clinging to the tracks, slipped off.

Street traffic was delayed for half an hour while the automobile was being removed. Police did not blame the captain, who lives at 2520 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Name the Dragon

You can't do much about a creature like the Komodo dragon that Dr. Mann brought to the Zoo from Sumatra. An amazing fellow, this dragon, no fire belching from his nostrils, maybe. No smoke. But what a body!

Your job—and ours—is to find a name for an incredible sort of beast that has a head like a Russian wolfhound, a tough, scaly hide and a slithering, swishy tail.

We wish we knew what to call him. Maybe you've got a good suggestion? All you have to do is fill in the ballot. Your name won't be mentioned unless you hit on the title that that dragon's going to be called from now on.

I think that the Komodo dragon at the Zoo should be named

G-Men in Sharpshooting Act for Identification Men Who Are Delegates to Convention of Association in D. C.

Oscar had a bad afternoon yesterday as may readily be seen from the above pictures, particularly (upper right), when J. Edgar Hoover's G-Men began taking potshots at cigarettes held in his mouth and potatoes stuck on his wooden fingers. One of the sharpshooters got to taking aim from a mirror (left), which probably was responsible for the general expression of spectator amazement (lower right).

J. Edgar Hoover's G-Men put on a firearms demonstration for 400 delegates of the International Association for Identification at Quantico, Va., yesterday and they "got their man."

He was "Oscar," the perfect stooge.

Standing, with one foot in the ground, so he could not move, "Oscar" withstood the onslaught of the sharpshooters despite the fact that cigarettes (chalk was used) were exploded in his mouth, and potatoes, attached to his wood hands by nails, were splattered into the mashed variety by bullets.

The delegates went to the Marine Barracks after visiting Mount Vernon, where a wreath was placed at the tomb of George Washington. The I. A. I. members watched a drill by the United States Marines, stationed at Quantico, under direction of Maj. Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, commanding officer.

The convention of the I. A. I. opened yesterday morning at the Willard Hotel for a four-day session.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and lecturer at the FBI police school, told the delegates to awaken the "moral forces of the community" in combating crime or face a "national emergency."

Four hundred thousand persons in the United States live by crime,

Dr. Walsh estimated, and the cost of the law enforcement is somewhere in the neighborhood of 15 billion dollars per year.

President Roosevelt, in a message, congratulated the I. A. I. for "the great strides made in fingerprint identification, ballistics, toxicology, and related matters."

Establishment of an international crime commission linking Canadian, United States and Mexican police was proposed by Col. S. T. Wood, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. He also urged collaboration with European crime commissions in studying police technique, organization and equipment.

This morning the delegates will meet at Great Hall in the Department of Justice, where they will hear addresses by Homer S. Cummings, Attorney General of the United States, and by Hoover.

Officials Delay 'Doubting Thomas' Convinced Of School Lunch Fund Need

Officials of the Postoffice and Treasury departments yesterday withheld comment on the report released by the Brookings Institution which bitterly assailed the relationship that exists between the various Federal agencies of crime detection.

The report, entitled "Crime Control by the National Government," is the result of a study conducted by Dr. Arthur C. Mittlepaugh, of the Brookings Institution. It attacks the Federal agencies for "unwillingness" to give credit to one another, for "feverish bursts of self-advertising," for "indirect attacks" on each other and for "lack of cordial personal contacts" among officials.

Friction Denied.

Herbert E. Gaston, special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, said "healthy rivalry, not friction," existed between the Treasury's six law enforcement units and other Federal crime agencies. He said the only case to the contrary, that of an attempted "investigation" by Secret Service agents of certain activities of the Bureau of Investigation, had been dealt with and the offenders reprimanded.

The Treasury official had no comment to make on the report's recommendation that a division be made of the activities of the Secret Service and that those activities which relate to counterfeiting, forgery, protection of the President and Government agencies outside his department be transferred, with a proportionate number of Secret Service personnel, to the Bureau of Investigation.

"The department may issue a statement when it has had an opportunity to study the report," he said.

Administrative heads of the Postoffice Inspection Service likewise withheld comment until the Brookings report is digested.

Joseph F. Gartland, assistant chief inspector, said his department is ever proud of its record of work quietly done and efficiently.

"Friction between this department and other crime detection agencies of the Government is unknown. If it pops up, we will go out of our way to remedy it," he said.

The Brookings report said lack of cordiality is "most apparent between the Federal agency outside of the Postoffice Department could be depending upon to protect the sanctity of the mails."

Dean John R. Fitzpatrick, of Columbus University, self-styled "doubting Thomas" of the citizens' emergency committee for the feeding of hungry school children, yesterday was convinced of the need for funds to aid the District's underfed pupils. With Mrs. John Boyle, jr., organizer of the committee, he visited classes at Seaton and some of G streets northwest, and actually saw the hungry children.

"My interest in the matter was aroused," he said last night, "and I was anxious to see just what the situation was. It was not that I doubted what the officials said; it was more that I found what they said incredible."

Dr. Fitzpatrick voiced his doubts as to the existence of 8,000 undernourished children here at a committee meeting Tuesday. After visiting classes at Seaton and some of the homes from which the children came, he said, "I now am convinced of the need though I am not yet sure of the extent. I am inclined to believe, however, that the condition is widespread."

14 of 34 Underfed.

In one fifth grade class, he was told by the teacher that 14 of her 34 pupils were undernourished. A sixth grade teacher estimated that 7 in her class were in the same plight. Only last week, he was told, a 9-year-old boy fainted at the blackboard, was hospitalized and was diagnosed as a case of defective nutrition.

In several instances teachers told him they had been buying lunches for the children out of their own pockets. "I came away with a distinct impression of the humanness and sympathetic understanding of the teachers with whom I came in contact," he said.

Everywhere Dr. Fitzpatrick received assurance that children listed as undernourished had been properly certified by both teacher and principal.

Flying Benefit Arranged.

Other developments in the free lunch campaign yesterday included the issuing of an order by the District Commissioners, authorizing policemen and firemen to sell tickets for the benefit boxing matches October 18.

The committee also learned yesterday that the Flying Angels, a troupe of ten aerial daredevils, will give benefit shows at College Park Airport Saturday and Sunday at 3 p. m. A large percentage of the receipts will be turned over to the fund. The troupe appeared here during the summer as "The Angels from Hell," but have changed their name to a more appropriate one for this occasion.

Two Bandits Rob 3 Liquor Stores of $600 in 20 Minutes

Two colored bandits raided three Northwest section liquor stores in 20 minutes last night and escaped with more than $600. Police believed they are the men who have robbed other liquor stores this month.

Services Are Held For Mrs. McCleery

Mrs. Elizabeth Poole McCleery, 68, widow of John F. McCleery, was buried yesterday afternoon in Rock Creek Cemetery, following services at the home of her brother-in-law, Sewell A. Reeves, 1859 Wyoming avenue.

The Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, officiated. Mrs. McCleery, who died at the Home for Incurables Monday, had been a member of the Episcopal Church for many years.

In addition to Mr. Reeves, Mrs. McCleery is survived by four half-brothers, John, William T. and Herbert A. Poole, of Washington, and Courtney L. Poole, of New York, and by two half-sisters, Mrs. Alice Prigg and Mrs. Robert W. Talks, of Washington.

25th Birthday Of Safety Move To Be Celebrated

Commemorating a quarter-century of achievement in the interests of safety, and the twenty-fifth anniversary of a meeting held in Chicago, September 30, 1912, representatives of safety organizations will place a wreath today at 4 p. m. on the grave of Dr. Joseph A. Holmes in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Dr. Holmes, first director of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, who died July 13, 1915, was one of 30 persons who attended the 1912 meeting. That meeting resulted in the formation of the National Safety Council, an organization whose membership now comprises thousands of business firms and individuals.

The progress of the safety movement in the United States during the 25 years that have elapsed will be reviewed at a gathering of the six survivors of the group, in Chicago today.

Daniel Harrington, chief engineer, Health Safety Branch, U. S. Bureau of Mines, will represent the bureau at the ceremony in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Bishop Asks Episcopal See Located Here

Stewart Will Advocate Designation of City at Convention.

Freeman Suggested as First to Preside Under Plan.

Chicago, Sept. 29 (AP).—Episcopal Bishop George Craig Stewart announced tonight he would advocate the designation of Washington, D. C., as the See city of the Episcopal Primate at the church's convention in Cincinnati, October 5.

Bishop Stewart made his statement in connection with a report from New York which proposed making the office of presiding bishop one of life tenure.

"There are many of us who feel that the proposal is not entirely satisfactory," the bishop said. "Under the plan the bishop elected would remain attached to his own diocese but would call for the election of a coadjutor bishop for such a diocese."

"I believe Washington should be designated as the See city, thus giving the presiding bishop a jurisdiction, and in order to make the plan immediately operative, I feel the present Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, should be designated as the first presiding bishop under the new plan."

The present presiding bishop of the church is the Right Rev. James DeWolf Perry, Bishop of Rhode Island, whose term expires next week. His diocese headquarters are at Providence.

Edwin N. Lewis has been appointed executive secretary and director of publicity of Washington Cathedral. It was announced yesterday by the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the cathedral, for Bishop James E. Freeman and the cathedral chapter.

Theater Guild Premiere Will Head New Week

'Madame Bovary' to Vie With Strong Films in Downtown Theaters.

The Theater Guild will offer as its first production in Washington this season Gaston Baty's dramatization of Flaubert's famous novel of "Madame Bovary" with Constance Cummings in the title role. Bessie W. Levy, the English playwright, author of "Mrs. Moonlight" and "Art and Mrs. Bottle," made the adaptation from the French and directed the production, which will have its American premiere in the National Theater on Monday night as the first play in the subscription series of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society. The 17 scenes in the play and the costumes of the 1840s in France were designed by Lee Simonson. Miss Cummings' part is that of a young wife, whose romanticism and sentimentality make her the prey of the seductive and a seeker after happiness with her two successive lovers. The supporting cast will present three actors new to Washington in Ernest Thesiger, Eric Portman and Carl Harbord, and also include Viola Roache, Harold Vermilyea, Eda Heinemann, O. Z. Whitehead, Valerie Cossart, John O'Connor, Maurice Mastrant and numerous others. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The Ritz Brothers, supported by Tony Martin, Joan Davis, Nat Pendleton, Gloria Stuart, Fred Stone, Dick Baldwin, Joan Marsh, Ed Prouty, Maurice Mastrant, Ed Thorsen and scores more, will occupy the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Twentieth Century-Fox" insane comedy, "Life Begins in College," the first of the season's football "classics." Slapstick fun, music and the gridiron are combined in this fast-moving exhibit, contrived by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger and directed by William A. Seiter. The stage portion of the new bill will be headlined by William and Joe Mandel and will include Minor and Root, Billy Reed, fast-stepping dancer; Nelson's boxing cat, the Yates Sisters and Harry Crosby's "Big Apple" dances.

Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938," executed entirely in Technicolor, will be the screen attraction at RKO-Keith's for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles in this glorification of fashion are played by Joan Bennett and Warner Baxter. In supporting roles are to be seen Helen Vinson, Mischa Auer, Alan Mowbray, Jerome Cowan, Alma Kruger, Marjorie Gateson and Hedda Hopper, among many others. The original screen play was written by Bella and Samuel Spewack, authors of "Boy Meets Girl." Direction was by Irving Cummings, former Washington stock favorite. The Walter Wanger Models play a conspicuous part in the display. The usual short subjects and Pathe News will complete the bill.

Bette Davis and Henry Fonda come to the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow in the co-stellar roles in the Warner Brothers production of "That Certain Woman," a film play that moves from New York City to Monte Carlo for its major action. The story concerns the former secretary of a gangster who marries a rich weakling. The supporting cast is made up, in part, of Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Donald Crisp, Hugh O'Connell, Mary Phillips and Herbert Rawlinson. It was written and directed by Edward G. Laughton, the headlining attraction of the stage portion of the entertainment will be supplied by Xavier Cugat and his orchestra and specialists, among them, Carmen Castillo, Latin songstress, Paramount News added.

John Barrymore, John Howard, Louise Campbell and Reginald Denny are the principal players in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," opening tomorrow as the new week's screen offering at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater. The plot is based on H. C. McNeile's "The Female of the Species." The story is said to contain all of the mystery, thrills and excitement expected by "Drummond" fans. Short subjects and a new, full newsreel also will be shown.

Loew's Palace Theater announces a continuance of the engagement of "Dead End" on the screen for a second week, beginning tomorrow. In this Samuel Goldwyn production of the Sidney Kingsley stage play the foremost roles are taken by Sylvia Sydney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Wendy Barrie and Claire Trevor, supported by a long cast, led by the youngsters who appeared as the wharf rats of the original Norman Bel Geddes production.

A new release in the "Popular Science" series of screen short-subjects and a novelty comedy, "Aviator Shorty," will feature the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, a color cartoon, "The Wayward Pigeon," and world newsreel coverage also will be prominent on the new program.

Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles and Anne Shirley will renew their downtown run in Samuel Goldwyn's picture of "Stella Dallas" at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this gripping story of mother love and juvenile environment important roles also are played by Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neil and Tim Holt. Short subjects and "Events of the Day" also will be shown.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the chief feature of the screen bill will be a revival of Samuel Goldwyn's picture of "Sinclair Lewis" novel of "Arrowsmith," with Ronald Colman in the name part and Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy in roles of prime feminine interest. The story was adapted to the screen by the playwright, Sidney Howard. Short sound subjects and newsreels will be added.

Following the current engagement of "Sex Madness" and "False Shame" at the Belasco Theater, the screen feature will be "Libertine." This subject was produced in Vienna by a foreign cast, but presents complete English dialogue titles.

After three successful years in Europe, Ireland's bombshell of sex, Joan McCauley, will return to Washington next week to feature in "The Playhouse School of the Theater" modern theater training for young men and women. Her includes KENNETH WOLFF, MAURICE MASTRANT, CAROLINE BELLAMY, MRS. VACHEL LINDSAY. Information at 1531 N. M. Ave. Telephone 3041, Room 1002.

Edmund Goulding Taps His Resourcefulness In Latest Film Play, Costarring Davis and Fonda

"That Certain Woman" Is a Drama of Swift Action and Admirable Casting; Kenyon Speaks at the National This Morning; Charlotte Greenwood Coming in New Comedy; Celebrities Rally to Cantor Celebration; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

THIS Edmund Goulding fellow, who wrote and directed "That Certain Woman," in which Bette Davis is to be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow, is one of Hollywood's most versatile practitioners.

Equally at home in either the dramatic or the musical medium, he has written, produced and directed as wide a range of screen subjects as can be credited to any single creative artist in the film colony. He even goes so far, now and again, as to compose theme songs for the pictures for which he is responsible before the cameras—as was the case, for example, when he wrote "Love" for Gloria Swanson in "The Trespasser."

He comes by this grasp of the theater's requirements naturally. Born in England, Goulding has had a wide experience in every branch of the theater, from headlining in vaudeville to acting serious roles on the stage and playwriting for the living theater prior to his transference of his talents to the cinema. Fortified by this broad personal contact with the playhouse, he wastes no time on nonessentials.

He is a playwright's and an actor's playwright, as well as one who does pretty well by the public.

This was demonstrated again yesterday afternoon, when "That Certain Woman" was unreel for the boys and girls of the press in the Warner Brothers private projection room in the Earle Theater Building. There is nothing lethargic or draggy about "That Certain Woman." She is a gal with a slightly glib, smooth, recurrent and technical skill whatever it may lack—if it lacks anything—the subtleties and minutiae of rigid character analysis. One feels occasionally that not all of the figures in his masquerade always would have behaved precisely as he makes them. "That Certain Woman" would not be as engrossing an entertainment as it is if they had not.

Not needing to be told that probably "they had something there," the Warner Brothers have given the picture everything they have in the way of cast, investment and embellishment. They have even dug up a very small boy who acts the part of a 4-year-old son of a temporarily disrupted marriage a little differently than 4-year-old sons of any sort of a mating ever have played before. This is a monosyllabic and staccato youngster, who steps up beside little Richard Goff, in "Forever Yours," as a diminutive lot who has something new to offer in his own particular way.

In addition to the presence in the cast of Bette Davis and Henry Fonda, as costars, Ian Hunter, Donald Crisp, Katherine Alexander, Minor Watson, Sidney Toler, Hugh O'Connell, Mary Phillips, Herbert Rawlinson and the aforementioned Master Dwayne Day, "That Certain Woman" is one of the most competent of the West Coast's younger actresses. By and large, we should say that "That Certain Woman" is another good for Goulding—and please don't pronounce "good" as "gool!"

Let it slip the minds of those who should be most interested, today is the day when the eminent Mr. Elmer Kenyon, former professor of drama at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, will speak in the National Theater, at 11 o'clock, on the topic of "The Season of 1937-38 in General and 'Madame Bovary' in Particular." Mr. Kenyon will appear under the auspices of the Theater Guild, the American Theater Society of Washington and Manager Edmund Flohn, of the National. He will be introduced by Dr. George F. Bowerman, of the Washington Public Library. While those especially invited to hear Mr. Kenyon include directors, teachers, writers and drama students in clubs, schools, universities and other Capital organizations, the general public will be welcome.

Speaking of the National, it is announced from that lone remaining citadel of the so-called legitimate drama in Washington that Charlotte Greenwood will return to town for the week of Monday, October 25, to present "The Season of 1937-38 in General and 'Madame Bovary' in Particular."

Star Hinges Wall As Wardrobe Idea

The problem of where to put large picture hats, not being worn, has been solved by Jeanette MacDonald, who has had a large section of the wall in her dressing room removed and hinged. This swings out and leaves behind just room for the hats to hang without being either bent or pressed out of shape.

Loew's Palace Theater announces a continuance of the engagement of "Dead End" on the screen for a second week, beginning tomorrow. In this Samuel Goldwyn production of the Sidney Kingsley stage play the foremost roles are taken by Sylvia Sydney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Wendy Barrie and Claire Trevor, supported by a long cast, led by the youngsters who appeared as the wharf rats of the original Norman Bel Geddes production.

A new release in the "Popular Science" series of screen short-subjects and a novelty comedy, "Aviator Shorty," will feature the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, a color cartoon, "The Wayward Pigeon," and world newsreel coverage also will be prominent on the new program.

Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles and Anne Shirley will renew their downtown run in Samuel Goldwyn's picture of "Stella Dallas" at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this gripping story of mother love and juvenile environment important roles also are played by Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neil and Tim Holt. Short subjects and "Events of the Day" also will be shown.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the chief feature of the screen bill will be a revival of Samuel Goldwyn's picture of "Sinclair Lewis" novel of "Arrowsmith," with Ronald Colman in the name part and Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy in roles of prime feminine interest. The story was adapted to the screen by the playwright, Sidney Howard. Short sound subjects and newsreels will be added.

Following the current engagement of "Sex Madness" and "False Shame" at the Belasco Theater, the screen feature will be "Libertine." This subject was produced in Vienna by a foreign cast, but presents complete English dialogue titles.

After three successful years in Europe, Ireland's bombshell of sex, Joan McCauley, will return to Washington next week to feature in "The Playhouse School of the Theater" modern theater training for young men and women. Her includes KENNETH WOLFF, MAURICE MASTRANT, CAROLINE BELLAMY, MRS. VACHEL LINDSAY. Information at 1531 N. M. Ave. Telephone 3041, Room 1002.

"That Certain Woman" Is a Drama of Swift Action and Admirable Casting; Kenyon Speaks at the National This Morning; Charlotte Greenwood Coming in New Comedy; Celebrities Rally to Cantor Celebration; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

THIS Edmund Goulding fellow, who wrote and directed "That Certain Woman," in which Bette Davis is to be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow, is one of Hollywood's most versatile practitioners.

Equally at home in either the dramatic or the musical medium, he has written, produced and directed as wide a range of screen subjects as can be credited to any single creative artist in the film colony. He even goes so far, now and again, as to compose theme songs for the pictures for which he is responsible before the cameras—as was the case, for example, when he wrote "Love" for Gloria Swanson in "The Trespasser."

He comes by this grasp of the theater's requirements naturally. Born in England, Goulding has had a wide experience in every branch of the theater, from headlining in vaudeville to acting serious roles on the stage and playwriting for the living theater prior to his transference of his talents to the cinema. Fortified by this broad personal contact with the playhouse, he wastes no time on nonessentials.

He is a playwright's and an actor's playwright, as well as one who does pretty well by the public.

This was demonstrated again yesterday afternoon, when "That Certain Woman" was unreel for the boys and girls of the press in the Warner Brothers private projection room in the Earle Theater Building. That Hand-Kisser Is in Again!

Having recently scored a great personal success in "It's All Yours"—and a considerable list before that—Mischa Auer returns to the local screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow in one of the principal roles of Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938," executed entirely in Technicolor. Once again, he is a "dilettante among the women," as demonstrated in the scene reproduced herewith with Joan Bennett, costarred with Warner Baxter in the new film.

Crawford Lapels Silver-Threaded

One of the smartest tailored suits of the season was worn this week by Joan Crawford for the first day's work in her new starring production, "Mannequin." Designed by Adrian, the suit was fashioned from fine, black woolen. The tailored coat emphasized lapels glittering with fine, silver thread embroidery. A silver lame blouse, black hat and accessories, completed the ensemble.

Fancy Togs.

Robert Benchley has had to invest in a suit of morning clothes for his work in "Live, Love and Learn," starring Robert Montgomery with Rosalind Russell. The fancy outfit is the first he has ever had, he says.

Hen Fruit.

Louise Hovick, Broadway artist, who made her first screen appearance in "Twentieth Century-Fox's" "You Can't Have Everything," owns a chicken farm in New York State.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Sept. 29.—Settin' Around (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer): Freddie Bartholomew's Aunt Cissie, the commanding general in that young gentleman's current salary strike, would have experienced an uncomfortable shock had she been with when I walked on the set where "Thoroughbred Don't Cry" is being filmed. In a far corner of the stage a block and tackle had been left by the construction crew, and swinging on the rope very gleefully was the counterpart of Freddie, a 13-year-old with features just as clean cut, voice just as cultured, hair just as curly and personality just as pronounced. Meet Ronald Sinclair, the "unknown" kid who overnight has become a star because Aunt Cissie decided that $1,150 a week is pin-money.

Ronald is playing the role that Freddie should have played—and playing it like a veteran trouper. Everyone on the set is singing his praises. During the first day's shooting he had to deliver three full pages of dialogue—an appalling task for an adult star—and he got through the ordeal without a slip. His voice records perfectly and he photographs perfectly. Already the crew that had worked with Freddie on half a dozen pictures is whispering that this newcomer is "maybe a better bet" and the studio has placed him under long-term contract.

The fact is that the day has passed when any actor could strike and tie up his studio. Five thousand people work at M-G-M, as many as 26 units shoot there simultaneously. It is a great machine and no one person can start, stop or control it.

Found the "Navy Blues" company on the back lot, shooting gridiron scenes. Between takes, group-leader Lionel Barrymore and cherub-faced Tom Brown kept up a running fire of banter. Lionel always refers to Tom as "that infantile squirt." But today the squirt has the upper hand. The Lions are scheduled to leave for England on completing this picture, is having passport trouble. The authorities demanded his birth certificate; he couldn't find it, either. "Imagine," Tom Brown was proclaiming to the crowd, "this man has the gall to jest about my youth and yet when his career depends on it he can't prove he's even been born!"

With CONSTANCE CUMMINGS Adapted and Directed by Ross W. Laux Settings and Costumes by Lee Simonson Night—Orch. $2.50; Bal. $2.00; A. $1.50; 2nd Bal. 75c; Mats. Wed. and Thurs. $2.00; Bal. $2.00; 2nd Bal. 75c. Plus tax.

With JIMMY FIDLER

Talked with Wallace Berry on the "Bad Man of Brimstone" set. The troupe is just returned from a location jaunt to Utah, where they found the mountain country alive with rattlesnakes. "Shucks," Wally rattled, "the people up there don't mind them at all. One day, we killed five whoppers within a hundred yards of the ranch house and I asked the rancher why he let his kids run around barefoot in a place like that."

"He laughed at my nervousness and insisted rattlers never hurt anyone who lets them alone. And then he said to me, 'Say, I'd really be worried if we lived down in California, with those Black Widow spiders—I hear they kill people!'"

Most outlanders find it hard to believe that actors who have worked for years in Hollywood are often complete strangers to one another. But, reflect that there are about 50,000 people employed in the picture industry—and digest this true incident. Today, work started on the "Mannequin" set with Joan Crawford (whose social life is within her own small circle) and Spencer Tracy (whose social life is almost nil) cast together for the first time. They had never met and Frank Borzage, the director, introduced them. When he had finished, Joan said to Spencer: "And now, Mr. Tracy, you'd better introduce me to Mr. Borzage; I've never met him, either."

Striking Gowns In Musical Movie

In "Big Broadcast of 1938," now in production, Edith Head will show at least 50 new fall and winter style creations. One outstanding number in this musical is the modern ballet with 36 dancers, led by Shirley Ross, wearing dramatic dresses of black net. The gowns are modern evening fashions inspired by the original ballet costume, and Miss Head gives credit to Russell Patterson, artist, illustrator and production consultant, for the idea.

New York, Sept. 29.
... AND DON'T FORGET to thank all the readers who sent me cards ... and Ben Lillie phoned to say those jackets she brought from Paris were pink—so I gave her one daughter ... Oh, yes, dear—buy yourself new hats ... Why? Well, don't tell your hats still sit!

12 P. M. "Watch this development in the Robert Irwin case," a Tammanyite whispers at the Tavern. "If things develop as expected, Sam Leibowitz, Irwin's famous lawyer, won't be able to try that case. Now here's the reason—but off the record!" "George White," a film official declares at the Cotton Club, "will sue Twentieth Century-Fox because of the routines Tip, Tap & Toe used in 'You Can't Have Everything'." The routines are White's, who originated them for that team in the 'Scandals' ... "We got this article from two Chicago police reporters," Quentin Reynolds, Collier editor, confides at Jack & Charlie's. "It proved that Al Capone is making more money today than he made in his heyday. I flew to Chicago, saw Police Chief Fitzgerald, Mayor Kelly and John Steege, who told me the article wasn't libelous, took me to 40 spots Capone operates—so we bought the story and will print it!"

1 A. M. "Joe Ryan, head of the Central Trades Union, will endorse Mahoney for Mayor," an industrialist tips at the Village Brewery. "He'll announce it in two weeks" ... "And did you know," a publisher contributes, "News-Week will have two new critics? George Jean Nathan will be the drama reviewer and Sinclair Lewis will review books" ... "Who is that nice-looking chap dancing with Mary Brian?" asks Mrs. Morgan Belmont at the Rainbow Room. "That's the boss' son," Band Leader Emery Deutsch identifies, "Winthrop Rockefeller."

2 A. M. Lew Tindler orders lobster at Benny Leonard's, and Benny suggests: "Rapport of beef, Lew." "Listen, Benny," Tindler tells him, "once I let you talk me out of the championship but I won't let you talk me out of the lobster" ... "This didn't hit the papers," a tennis official reveals at the Harlem Uproar House. "Helen Wills Moody refused to play tennis with Baron von Cramm at that California match last week. She quit the tournament and went home."

3 A. M. "Those newsreel shots of Roosevelt thumbing his nose were censored," Jack Colt, a son of Ethel Barrymore, is told at La Conga. "They were deleted—after Government officials requested it" ... "Joe Louis took his soft-ball team to Hollywood today," William Gaston states at the 18 Club. "He'll play the teams of Joe E. Brown and Stephen Fetchis. The boys on Joe's team are pals from his old neighborhood in Detroit. He'll take them all over the country" ... "Well, Otto," George K. Arthur tells Otto Kruger at Ruby Foo's, "I'm going to make a comeback in the movies" ... "So Martha Raye wants police protection?" Conrad Nagel sighs at the Hollywood. "Imagine a girl who can scream that loud being afraid!" "Eugene O'Neill is in such good shape," a producer declares at the Versailles, "he's working at break-fast time now—and positively will have two plays on the Broadway boards next season."

4 A. M. "I just came back from Indian Town Gap, Pa.," a newsreel executive confides at Le Mirage. "I went there to photograph the newest developments in chemical warfare. So Maj. Gen. Boulay, commanding the Third Corps Area, had the tanks go through maneuvers, spouting the new chemicals, etc. Then I asked them to do a repeat to make sure everything'd be okay. But the general exhibiting the new gas warfare said he couldn't oblige because the tanks were all out of the simplest kind of gas—gasoline!"

5 A. M. "Get this," an agent whispers at the Russian Kretschma. Robert Sinclair will withdraw as director of "That Austrian Woman" in which Jane Cowl will star. "Sure I'm lovelick," the villain orates at Bill Bertolotti's. "I got a hangerover in my heart" ... "Arthur Pollack, drama critic for the Eagle, joined the strike," a Guildsman relates at the Gay 90's. "At the opening of 'The Lady Has a Heart' picketers walked past his successor, sitting on the aisle, and whispered 'Scab, scab, scab!'"

6 A. M. "The Christmas number of Esquire is so big," a novelist states at the Ambassador. "It went to press August 10" ... "So I wrote to Elmer Layden, asking to buy two tickets for the Army-Notre Dame game," Roy Campbell sighs at the Paradise. "Layden replied, and said he couldn't get them for me—because of the limited capacity of Yankee Stadium. Limited capacity my eye. Doesn't he know the stadium holds 80,000?" ... Prince Rospigliosi sits boredly at the Yumuri and listens to a reporter say: "In St. Louis the best seller is 'How to Win Friends and Influence People.' No. 2 on the list is 'How to Lose Friends and Alienate People' ... 'We're rivals,' Eddie Duchin announces at the Plaza, pointing to Buddy Clarke. 'My uncle was the one who told me to Yale students and his father's the tailor at Harvard' ... 'Scott Fitzgerald,' an agent assures at the Pepper Pot, "has one-third of an act to go—and then his new play's finished."

In "Leaning on Letty," a straight comedy-drama having to do with a tourist retreat on the old Boston Post Road that is seized by a band of kidnappers as he hidout, much to the consternation of Letty Madison, his owner and operator.

Since this will be Miss Greenwood's first appearance in the National Capital in too many seasons, the star has agreed to add a musical postscript to her play, in which will be incorporated some of the songs and dances that took London by the ears while the elongated and agile Miss Greenwood has been playing truant from America.

Some five years ago, Carter Barron, being an old gridiron galloper himself at Georgia Tech, inaugurated the annual custom of tossing theater parties for local and visiting football teams at Loew's Capitol, near Fox Theater. That pigskin practice now is to be resumed, Georgetown and Shenandoah clash here on Saturday and, on Friday night at 8, will converge on the Capitol, as guests of the management, to see the Little Redskins in "Life in College," from which they will learn a brand of football of which they never have so much as dreamed. They will be saluted with special music by Phil Lampkin and his melody punters. During subsequent weeks of the season, the Capitol hopes to play host to the varsity squads of each of the local colleges and universities along with their visiting opponents on the Friday nights preceding their Saturday melees. Furthermore, the Loew theater is hanging up a handsome trophy to be awarded at the end of the football season, to the local player proving himself most valuable to his team. All that ought to put Mr. Barron over for a touchdown and extra goal point.

Eddie Cantor ought to be going around these days wearing an air of colossal pride and tremendous humility. The early response of world leaders to act on the honorary committee sponsoring the Eddie Cantor Anniversary Week, signifying his completion of 25 years in American amusements, is such as to mark a new high in distinguished achievement and national prominence.

To name only a few names, acceptances have been received at the Los Angeles headquarters of the project from Gen. John J. Pershing, Dr. Allan Roy. Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

In the quest for game and rubber, reasonable risks cannot be avoided. The difficult point is in the determination of what is reasonable and what is unreasonable. If one is playing a vulnerable redoubled contract, he can hardly play in a wide-open fashion. The 600 points per trick for all undertricks after the first must, of course, act as a grim warning signal. On the other hand, if one is playing an undoubled contract and sees no hope of success except through a remote chance, it is still worth while to play for that chance. To go down an extra 100 or 200 points if it falls is no great calamity. Declarer, in the hand below, proceeded on this philosophy.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

Ab Jenkins, World's Safest Driver, Establishes 87 New Records for Safety, Speed,
Mileage and Endurance ... He Drove 3,774
Miles in 24 Hours on the Sharp Granite-like Surface of the Bonneville Salt Beds at Average Speed of 157.27 Miles an Hour

AT SPEEDS as high as 180 miles an hour—with the hot, coarse, abrasive salt grinding, tearing, scorching his tires—Ab Jenkins' special racer, weighing nearly three tons, pounded over the Bonneville Salt Beds last week at such terrific speed that it caused the surface to break up. Before the end of the run the track was so pitted and rough that it was almost impossible to hold the car on its course. Yet Jenkins set 87 new World, International and American speed records on Firestone Tires.

Building tires capable of establishing such records is made possible by patented Firestone manufacturing processes. These exclusive features enable Firestone to provide car owners with tires that are extra safe. For the greatest protection of yourself and your family equip your car with Firestone TRIPLE-SAFE Tires. By TRIPLE-SAFE we mean—

- 1 PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—The scientific tread design gives longer non-skid mileage and stops your car up to 25% quicker.
- 2 PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—Firestone Tires run up to 28 degrees cooler because every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. This counteracts the internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.
- 3 PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread give extra protection against punctures.

Make your car tire-safe for fall and winter driving. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new FIRESTONE TRIPLE-SAFE Tires—the safest tires that money can buy!

YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO DRIVE WITHOUT FIRESTONE TRIPLE-SAFE TIRES

Last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children and a million more were injured! More than 46,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to smooth, worn, unsafe tires!

Right is a section cut from a new Firestone Triple-Safe tire. It shows the liquid rubber saturation which provides extra protection against skidding, blowouts and punctures. Come in and see a demonstration.

Left is a section cut from a smooth, worn tire. It shows the lack of liquid rubber saturation which provides no extra protection against skidding, blowouts and punctures. Come in and see a demonstration.

Cummings Again Will Ask Congress for More Justices

Hughes Report Jibes With Own Plan, He Avers

Attorney General Denies Implied Criticisms by Lower Court.

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings, contending a report signed by Chief Justice Hughes agrees in part with President Roosevelt's defeated court proposal, announced yesterday he would ask Congress again to authorize additional Federal judges.

The Hughes report, adopted last week by the annual Conference of Senior Circuit Court Judges, and made public Tuesday, recommended appointment of 16 new Federal judges, 4 for the circuit courts and 12 for district courts.

Cummings said at his press conference that this recommendation was "exactly what the President's program called for." In his Supreme Court proposals, President Roosevelt requested authority to name up to 50 new judges, exclusive of the Supreme Court, in district and circuit courts, one for each judge more than 70. He also asked authority for the Chief Justice to assign any circuit or district judge to any circuit or district, respectively, creation of a Supreme Court proctor to advise as to docket congestion, and provision for the Attorney General to intervene in cases involving constitutional issues, the last of which has already been written into law.

Age Not Mentioned.

The report of the judges' conference made no mention of additional Supreme Court justices, nor of relating appointments in the lower courts to the age of present judges. In making its recommendations for additional judges in certain districts, the conference cited figures supplied by Cummings. Referring to the information he gave the conference, the Attorney General told reporters:

"The major matter which I stressed, which the conference approved, was the necessity of speeding up the process of our courts, and providing additional judges for the purpose of relieving congestion."

'Behind in Work.'

"The last objective was one of the major points in the President's court reform program."

In announcing he would ask Congress to carry out the conference recommendation, Cummings said the judges are behind in their work.

"On that issue," he added, the conference report "is a complete capitulation to the proposition that additional federal judges were needed, and a welcome one."

Early approval of the recommendation of the judicial conference that three additional justices be appointed to the District Court was voiced yesterday by a large delegation of District lawyers attending the American Bar Association's convention in Kansas City.

The delegates added that they would urge in the future that "fair recognition be given the just claim of the District Bar Association to representation."

"Our delegation greeted the information of the recommendation with great joy," wired Henry I. Quinn, president of the District Bar Association.

"We will heartily back the recommendation which seeks to speed justice in our courts."

Reich to Build New Embassy at Bancroft Place

Work Expected to Start on Modern Structure in Spring.

A new embassy will be built by Germany at Bancroft place and S street, it was learned yesterday, replacing the historic red-brick structure so long occupied by the Reich mission at 1335-39 Massachusetts avenue overlooking Thomas Circle.

Approval of the project has come from Chancellor Hitler. The new structure will be erected on property owned for the last 30 years by the German government and acquired when Baron S. Von Sternburg was the imperial ambassador, in the glittering era of braids and swords before the twilight of kings.

It was announced yesterday that the new embassy would be in modern German style. A competition now is under way among German architects for a design. Plans, it is hoped will be completed by January or February, and the work started soon thereafter.

The present embassy, somewhat resembling a Rhenish castle, was first acquired by the German Empire in 1892, four years after Kaiser Wilhelm ascended the throne. It was the scene of gay parties in the days of the Empire, before the World War.

YOU CAN THROW CARDS IN HIS FACE ONCE TOO OFTEN

WHEN you have those awful cramps; when your nerves are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love. Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man. A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "Smiling Through." —Adv.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Problem Which is Currently Financial, but May Become Emotional, Is Stated by Debt-Ridden Wife.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is financial, not emotional. I have two children. My husband is a professional man, earning at present between $4,000 and $5,000 a year. His income is quite adequate to meet our current expenses, although, because of the necessity for "keeping up appearances" and because of considerable business expense, there is no surplus.

Before the depression my husband was earning between $7,000 and $8,000 a year and will eventually (I hope) earn that much again. However, beginning with 1930, his income gradually dwindled until, in 1933, it amounted to about $2,000. For business reasons, it was utterly impossible to cut our living expenses from $8,000 down to $2,000. Had we done so, the next year there wouldn't have been even the $2,000. So we cut as much as we dared—and went into debt.

My father died in 1934, leaving my mother partially dependent upon us. She was very ill following his death and our doctors' and nurses' bills were staggering. While she was convalescent my husband had appendicitis and more doctors' and hospital bills were added to the list. Ever since then we have been robbing Peter to pay Paul—paying last year's bills with this year's income and letting this year's bills go, until the strain is beginning, to tell on us both. The worry and embarrassment of these debt-ridden days is hurting my husband professionally, thereby curtailing his income.

It's a vicious circle and I can't see my way out. We have borrowed all we can at the bank and the loan has to be curtailed monthly. All of us, and particularly the children, are badly in need of dental work. There are repairs which must be made on the house. And there are "bills rendered" that hang over us like a nightmare.

Our crying need is for a loan of perhaps $1,000 at a moderate rate of interest that could be paid back over a period of two and a half or three years. But so far as I know, there is no institution where a loan could be secured on such a basis. With all the Foundations—Carnegie, Rockefeller, Russell Sage and others—I know of no Foundation that lends money to respectable middle-class families who are temporarily and acutely in need of financial rehabilitation.

I have said that my problem is financial, not emotional. But I am beginning to believe it will inevitably become an emotional problem if I don't find a solution soon. It is becoming increasingly hard to give the children that feeling of security and stability which I believe is an important function of the home. Anyone who has ever experienced the mental hazard of trying to stretch an income inadequate to meet current expenses—to cover current maintenance and a burden of accumulated debts will understand our problem. To be able to clean off all these bills and to be able to repay the indebtedness over a period of years would be heaven, I think. Incidentally, I have a job—of course—which I do at home and which brings in a small and somewhat irregular income.

If I had a million—more or even less—I can think of no more worthwhile philanthropy than the establishment of a lending agency such as I have suggested. A sufficient rate of interest should be charged to cover administrative costs and the fund should be administered by a disinterested board similar to those operating other Foundations. I have written this letter in the faint hope that you may know of such an organization or individual who might be willing to make such a loan. Yours truly,

DEPRESSED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DEPRESSED: So far as I can learn, there is no organization or individual that might make such a loan as you desire. The consensus of opinion of several experts in budget and financial matters, whom I consulted with reference to your query, is that such a loan is probably out of the question, definitely inadvisable, and that the solution of your problem lies in re-vamping your standard of living to permit a debt liquidating surplus.

One man, a financial expert for a nationally known institution, shook his head at your theory that it is necessary for you to "keep up appearances" to the breaking point in order to keep your husband afloat professionally. He maintains, and I am inclined to agree with him, that it is false pride and not real business acumen which is prompting you to keep up this false and shaky front; and that, furthermore, it is probably fooling no one but yourself and may even be subtracting from, rather than contributing to, your husband's professional prestige.

The mark of the really able man is ability to trim his sails according to prevailing winds; and it is the very essence of business integrity and self-respect to live within one's means. When a man's income dwindles from $8,000 to $2,000 a year and he is accidentally overtaken by a wholly unpredictable and overwhelming debt, it is absurdly ostentatious to continue to maintain an $8,000 front. A man's professional worth is judged almost entirely by his ability to produce results; and there are few, if any, professional persons (as you are learning) who can retain the mental poise, physical vigor and steady nerves so necessary for doing first-class work when they are haunted day and night by financial worries.

meals at an average cost per person of $12 a month or less. You can use out casual and careless expenditures of the $8,000, or even $4,000-a-year variety and get down to the business-like and inexorable budgeting which $2,500 a year compels.

If a $1,000 loan, paid back over a period of 30 months with interest, would get you out of debt, that means you can discharge the obligation at a present monthly economy of something like $35. Surely you can make that saving by dispensing with some current pretty pretense of non-existent affluence. It may mean going without vacation trips or summer camps for the children, cutting down on entertaining and waiving burdensome Christmas giving. It may mean fewer and less expensive, but nonetheless smart, clothes. By borrowing with interest you are only adding to your indebtedness.

Rather than rob Peter to pay Paul, face the figures in the case and work out an economy budget plan which gives a small monthly cash surplus to be prorated among all your creditors in proportion to your indebtedness to them. Get advice from the Medical Economic Security Administration, 717 I street northwest, on how to meet your doctors' and hospital bills so that each creditor will understand your situation and respect your efforts. Make a like arrangement with the credit managers of all business houses which hold you in arrears. Ask Miss Julia Homold, economist with the Home Economics Division of the Department of Agriculture, to give you pamphlets and counsel on ways and means of getting your household and personal expenditures under control. And, if you like, talk things over with your banker and see if he will work out a new financing scheme in return for your pledge hereafter to stick within certain prescribed limits of expenditure.

Sculptured Profile Adds to Smartness

As important to smartness as the new silhouette is the new sculptured-like profile, according to Miss Rosalind de Marantz, who is in Washington this week at a local store, representing a nationally known cosmetic concern. For quick, effective action in remodeling the contour of the face, and correcting flabbiness, she advises one of three masks, according to your individual needs. The beautifull mask, she said, is ideal for lifting the muscles of the face and tightening contours; it is made of specially woven silk and used with a special tightening lotion. Its aim also, is to iron out forehead and expression wrinkles.

Little Dog Easy to Embroider With Applique on Stitchery

"WHERE, oh where has my little dog gone?" See him perched cockily on the border of the scarf, or sitting pretty in each corner of the bridge cloth. What fun it is to do him in plain embroidery, or in simple applique, the embroidery chiefly in running and outline stitch. Even though he'd make a "doggy" Christmas gift, you'll want to keep him yourself. In pattern 6943 you will find a transfer pattern of six motifs 4 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches, applique pattern pieces, and four small bridge motifs; color suggestions; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 250 N. Fourteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The New Velvets, Practical and Durable

By Ethel Ehlen.

In line with the importance of rich fabrics for both daytime and evening this fall and winter velvet is assuming a new interest in the fashion picture. It is a new type of velvet, however, as practical as it is elegant in appearance. Due to the new crush-resistant and water-repellent qualities, velvet is no longer considered perishable; many of the newest velvets are also washable. Because of this new practicality and sturdiness velvets are extremely versatile, being equally suitable for tailored daytime clothes and formal evening wear.

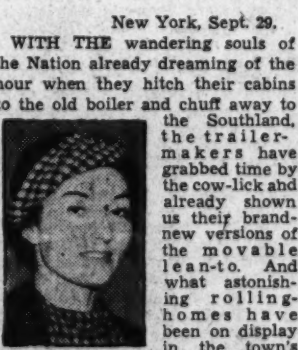

Velvet has gone casual in styling, as illustrated by the smartly tailored black crush-resistant velvet dress above, adaptable to almost any age or figure. The simplicity of the styling sets off effectively the beauty of the material. The clever collar, sleeve trimming and belt are white silk faille; the new sleeve length, crushed softly about the arm. The two-toned gold clip and wide bracelet in modern heavy design match the unique fastenings down the front of the blouse. The complementing accessories are hat of black antelope, black velvet gloves with white stitching and leather palms by Aris, black antelope handbag. An ensemble ideal for either business or school.

With the return of velvet to the style scene it is much in evidence as trimming on suits, coats and dresses, accenting both heavy and sheer woolsens. Velvet accessories have also made their appearance; gloves, hats, belts and handbags for day wear and long or short evening coats and formal calots for dinner or topping cocktail costumes. Velvet negligees and lounging pajamas in the new subdued, brilliant color tones, with harmonizing sandals trimmed in gold or silver kidskin, add formality and a note of luxury to the leisure hours.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

WITH THE wandering souls of the Nation already dreaming of the hour when they hitch their cabins to the old boiler and chuff away to the Southland, the trailer-makers have grabbed time by the cowlick and already shown us their brand-new versions of the movable lean-to. And what astonishing rolling homes have been on display in the town's first show exclusively to trailers!

Over 40 models of the new national problem were shown to the public—with itching feet, ranging from one-wheel trailerettes (how cunning!) to a regular wheeled homestead, consisting of no less than two bedrooms, a living room, kitchen and bath. Though this might be considered the perfect Road-Jammer, it was really designed, I hear, for use in areas devastated by raging waters. And the prices at our show have run from about $100 to $1,500, for out-sized models. On this subject, our trailer camp in the Bronx for the Legion confab was far from jammed, only about 300 parking there, and the local peasants made life hard and nervous with their curiosity about houses that move. They insisted on poking right inside as though the place was a zoo or pop-stand! Those noisy New Yorkers! But those that used the lot enjoyed it. Among our Legion trailerettes were the R. S. Ashleys, of Albany, Ga., who have already covered 23,000 miles in theirs, and the George M. Farmingtons, of Vermont, whose rolling tepee was bigger and more homely than many a Gotham apartment. These trailers, and the will to use them, are strong phenomena to most New Yorkers. We just rook here—root awhile, and quietly pass away—in this biggest and baddest of bedlams! Mama, what is a cow?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Darned if it doesn't seem that there is no such thing as just plain, honest American clothes any more. The last few years have seen the peasant duds of every country on earth copied or adapted for our use. At this moment the promoters are still in the Balkans, but have shifted from 1936 Dalmatian to 1937 Hungarian! The Magyar motif is noticeable all over our style avenues. Some day some one is going to create and properly sell to us just as well American clothes, and may heaven speed the day! I, for one, am sick and tired of beads, fringes and trick embroidery!

William Huntington Wright, or the pappy of Philo Vance, detective, is first to bat with a new game for the long winter evenings around the open fire and the elder jug. Yep, it's a detecting game, and six people can play at spotting the murderer! Thanks, I'll still play bingo, which is easy on the brain.

Brides have always featured fashion shows, but a local big store has just hurried a show to end all bridal displays. This glamorous razzle-dazzle, in the presence of hundreds, set forth no less than seven separate bridal parties in various types of get-up, ranging from sweet and simple to grandiose and vulgar-rich. All seven brides hurled bouquets at the mob. Six of the parties were formal. The seventh was just a rusty old second-wedding, and not nearly so fancy! Seven bridal parties in one might nearly finish me. Last the old resilience, I reckon!

Your Figure, Madame!

Correct Posture Assures Needed Poise in All Walks of Life.

By Ida Jean Kain.

A SUPERB posture gives a woman more poise than any other single possession—with the possible exception of a million dollars. So important is posture to a career that as her first lesson, the young hopeful of the screen learns how to stand and to walk beautifully and without self-consciousness through corrective exercise good posture comes natural.

ness. As a result of this rigorous elementary training beautiful posture becomes ingrained in the actress. To all appearances the main difference between the figure of the average woman and that of the screen star is that the average woman has a "tummy" and the movie girl has muscular control—which she has acquired through posture discipline.

In posture training the emphasis is placed on the abdominal muscles. The movie novice is drilled constantly in the practice of holding that tummy up. Never at any time, does she relax those important muscles drawing up and in with the diaphragm and the chest, gives the head a proud lift and tucks the hips in where they belong.

Good posture is every bit as important to you as it is to the screen star. It reflects your confidence in your own ability and influences your business and social careers. Business executives are almost as insatiable in their demands for good posture as any movie director. More than one applicant has walked herself out of the job after qualifications entitled her to fill. Just a dozen steps may be a deciding factor.

A simple but effective posture corrective is to stand with the back to the wall, heels one to three inches out and head, hips and shoulders touching the wall. Flatten the lower part of the back by drawing up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. Now, walk away from the wall with the weight well forward on the ball of the foot. Practice doing this in front of a full-length mirror and mark the improvement it makes in your figure.

For an accurate analysis of your posture, you might like to have a shadowgraph taken. This is practically the same thing as the silhouette. It is a photograph of your figure in silhouette which shows exactly where you are out of line. Many gymnasiums and body-proportioning salons now offer this service in connection with corrective exercises.

The two most common postural defects are sloped shoulders, accompanied by a forward head and neck, and round upper back and hollow lower back. Sloped shoulders tend to flatten the chest and allow the shoulder blades to protrude. With a round upper back and hollow lower back there is a compensatory abdominal curve.

Here is an exercise which helps to counteract all of these faults: Position: Sitting on a low stool, grasping a wand in both hands. Movement: Swing both legs forward until they are extended straight in front of the body. At the same time, raise the arms overhead, then bend the elbows and bring the wand down back of the shoulders, round upper back and hollow lower back. Return to position and repeat the exercise ten times.

Bettina Belmont Is Set To Open 'Flea Market'

Hunt Leaders Expected to Visit Display of Boots, Saddles, Linen, Glassware at Middleburg; Project Patterned After European Idea.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

You might call it a white elephant sale, or a rummage sale, or a glorified junk exchange, but Bettina Belmont—with a flair for infusing a familiar setup with foreign atmosphere—has named her new project at Middleburg a "Flea Market"—patterned in a small way after the famous

HOPE R. MILLER

"Marchés de Puces" of Paris. When it opens tomorrow, you can count on it no end of people from Washington and the fashionable hunt country will be on hand, buying boots and saddles, fine linen and glassware, hunting accessories and what-not, old and new. Miss Belmont, in case you don't know, is the daughter of Mrs. Arthur White, of Middleburg, and the late Raymond Belmont, of New York, and has made a name for herself as a sportswoman. Since bowing to society last winter at the North Wales Club, in Warrenton, and mingling with Washington's debutante set at many a party, she has divided her time between Virginia and New York—putting in an appearance wherever there has been a topflight horse show or horse race.

Now she's to settle down to flea-marketing for a few months—to bring on your old boots and saddles and see what happens. Having returned to Middleburg four days ago, Miss Belmont has been busy morning, noon and night, planning for the opening, which, in her own words yesterday, "will have no special feature. I'll just open shop; that's all."

But while customers mill about her market, looking over the stock on opening day, Miss Belmont will be watching them, with an idea to business, seeing which type of merchandise has the most popular appeal. Then, in about ten days, she'll take a quick trip to New York to acquire some more "flea merchandise."

Considers Baskets Choicest Stock

To her own way of thinking, prize items to be displayed tomorrow will be dog baskets, woven from corn stalks and set off with tweed-covered cushions (just the thing for your pet Peke or Pom, Madam).

In connection with the market, the Jockey Book Exchange that Miss Belmont helped to sponsor last year is to have a new line of candies and cosmetics that will probably have as wide an appeal as the best-sellers.

According to present plans, Miss Belmont will keep shop until some time in January—when she'll go now and then to attend big sports events, of course—and then she'll call a halt and take a holiday. Meanwhile, she'll find some time from the press of business to come to the Capital frequently to visit her many friends.

Whether Miss Belmont or the Washington Arts Club got the idea first, fact is both have been working out plans for similar sales. Difference is, the Arts Club's "Poire aux Croutes," or if you patriotically prefer English—"Fair of the Crusts"—will be centered around second-hand wares, while the Middleburg market will feature both new and old merchandise. Then, too, Miss Belmont's is to last through the fall and part of the winter, while the Arts Club will be in business only three days, beginning October 14.

Arts Club to Have Numerous Features

Chances are, several members of the club will journey down to Middleburg in the next week or so to get some ideas from the "Flea Market." Meanwhile, having sponsored junk sales since 1930, they're doing some creative fancy planning on their own.

The French have another name for it—but the Arts Club will call one of its side features a "side-walk cafe," with tables arranged on the street in front of headquarters and a bevy of pretty girls in French costumes to serve customers as they stop to rest from buying bargains at the sale. Miss Marie Walcott will be in charge of the cafe, while Mrs. Ralph Richards will preside over the bon bon and cigarette stall and Mrs. Norman Anderson will supervise a waffle and doughnut stand.

The Arts Club Follies, presented three times each evening under the direction of "Benny" Smart, will be another feature of the three-day, city-wide event that will bring a bit of Paris to the Capital. The "Poire aux Croutes" (Fair of the Crusts) will be open each afternoon and evening from 2 to 10 o'clock. Remember the dates—October 14, 15 and 16. The "Flea Market." Oh, that opens tomorrow—at Middleburg.

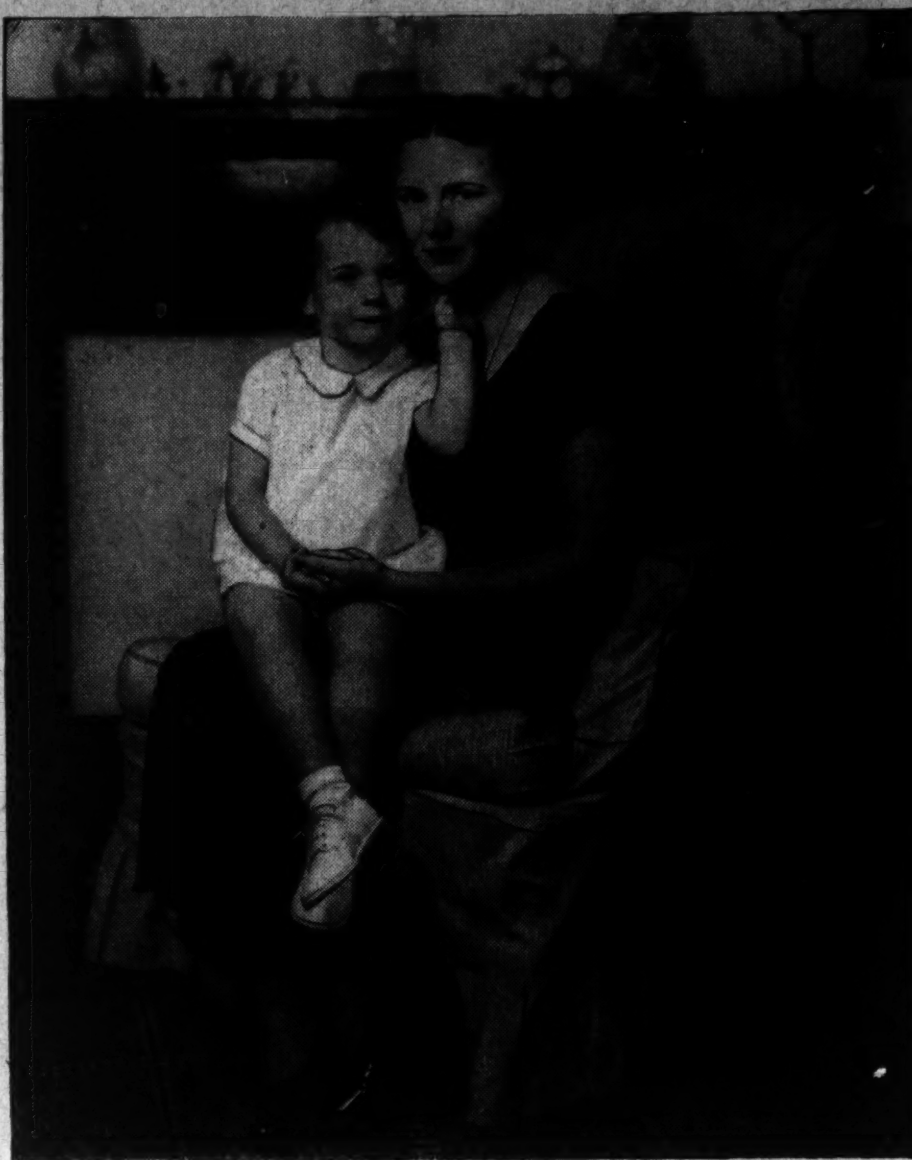

Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, of Washington, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given Tuesday by Mrs. James Jesse Atkinson in the garden of the Ambassador Hotel in New York City. Mrs. T. L. Bacon Parks, of Washington, and Mrs. David H. Kinchelow were other guests in the party.

Visits Assistant Postmaster General

Mrs. Raymond Hunt, with her daughter, Louise, of Wilmington, N. C., who is now visiting her parents, the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith W. Purdum. She will conclude her two weeks' stay with them Saturday. Before coming to Washington, Mrs. Hunt spent some time in Lansdowne, Pa.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

A CLUBHOUSE and some more girl members are all the Fairfax Hunt Club yearns for at the moment, now that it's about to open the season with a meet on 90 brand new acres recently purchased on Hunting Mill road. Invitations are out for the first hunt of the autumn, to take place at 9 a. m. Saturday, October 16.

"We expect there'll be 25 pink coats in the field," confidently predicted Secretary-Treasurer Robert Wilson yesterday. Invitations have been sent to every neighboring hunt, and acceptances are already in from Sterling Larrabee, M. F. H. of the Old Dominion Hounds at Crest Hill, Va.; Dr. Archibald Cary Randolph, of the Piedmont Hunt; Thomas Mott, of the Redmond Hunt, in Rockville, and the master of the Beaufort Hunt in Harrisburg, Pa.

Just as the famous pink coats are really not pink at all, but bright red, so are hunt breakfasts served any time at all except the usual. The Fairfaxers have scheduled theirs for 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the sixteenth, and 'twill be held at Burgundy Farm, the home of Dr. William McClellan near Alexandria. Besides being one of the chief pillars of the National Symphony Orchestra, the doctor, with Reed Thomas, is joint master of the Fairfax hounds. His house, made over from an old farm, has a wonderful view over the surrounding countryside, and fairly reeks with the atmosphere of old Virginia.

as well, for we remember looking for the place so long one afternoon last spring that by the time we arrived the last piece of stuffed celery was gone.

HEADQUARTERS of the Fairfax Club were until this year located on the Smith Bowman place at Sunset Hill, Va. Growing every season since it was started, exactly ten years ago, the hunt has taken in eight or ten new members these past few months, with promise of more to come.

Since the resignation of Mrs. James Gibson, the former Patience McCormick-Goodhart, the girls who ride with the hunt number only a few, among them Teenie Ekengren, Mrs. Henry T. Hunt, and Miss Jeannette Francis, niece of Dr. McClellan. Helen Davis, daughter of Dwight Davis, is among those who have expressed a desire to join, so no doubt the feminine contingent will be increased. At least the masters hope so. Jan Wilson, wife of the secretary-treasurer, and a niece of Nicholas Murray Butler, is going to take up the sport this autumn and hopes soon to be out in the field.

AS NEAR A CAVE-DWELLER as it's possible for a transitory diplomat to be is Dr. Josef Nemecek, Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, who has been in Washington nine years. This is thrice the usual foreign assignment, but it's all over now, and Dr. Nemecek has been ordered back to the foreign office in Prague. While here he has made his home at the Anchorage. Dr. Nemecek's place will be taken by Dr. Karel Brejska, who will arrive the middle of October with his wife and two daughters.

MRS. WALLACH MERRIAM is expected back this evening to her Nineteenth street residence after spending the summer in Newport with her sister, Mrs. Woodbury Blair. Mr. and Mrs. George Peter, who have been visiting the former's parents, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, have returned to their home in Cambridge, Mass.

First Secretary Of Czech Legation To Marry Monday

Letters from Otakar Kabelac, First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, who is now in Prague, impart the news of his engagement and approaching marriage to Miss Helen Gertrude Eberhard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karel Eberhard, of Karlovy Vary (Carlsbad), Czechoslovakia. The wedding will take place on Monday in the parish church of Karlovy Vary, and Mr. Kabelac and his bride will leave for Italy immediately after the ceremony. They will sail October 11 on the Vulcania from Naples for America, and will arrive in Washington October 21.

Miss Eberhard is the daughter of a prominent manufacturer of Czechoslovakia. Mr. Kabelac has been vacationing in his country for the past few weeks.

Miss Norford Will Be Wed to Son of Senator

Marriage to Ross P. Pope to Take Place October 6 at Boise.

From Boise, Idaho, comes word that Miss Jane Smith Norford, of Alexandria, Va., will be married there October 6, to Ross P. Pope, elder son of Idaho's junior Senator and Mrs. James P. Pope.

A simple church wedding will be conducted at the Congregational Church, with only a few friends of the couple in attendance.

Mr. Pope, who is associated with a hotel in Boise, was graduated last June from George Washington University where Miss Norford was also a student.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsey Norford, of Alexandria.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Larrabee will close Oak Wood, their Warrenton home, this week to go to their hunting lodge, at Crest Hill, in Virginia. Mr. Larrabee is Master of the Old Dominion Hounds and spends every winter at his Crest Hill home.

Mrs. Larrabee's niece, Miss Mary Stokes, is expected to spend several week-ends with them this fall, and to ride to hounds with the Old Dominion and Warrenton packs. She has hunted a great deal in England.

Miss Stokes is at present visiting her father, Sylvanus Stokes, at his home, Whitehall Farm, near Annapolis.

The 1935 F Street Club will open its season tomorrow with a Dutch treat luncheon for members.

Col. and Mrs. Torr Are Back in City

The military attache of the British Embassy, Col. Wyndham Torr, and Mrs. Torr, have returned to their apartment at the Shoreham, after an absence of several months. Immediately before returning they were in Philadelphia as guests of Mrs. Charles M. Lea while Col. Torr was judging the Bryn Mawr Horse Show.

Spends her winters in Washington and will arrive in the Capitol later in the season. Upon leaving Washington in the early summer Col. and Mrs. Torr went to Bar Harbor, Me., as guests of Mrs. Peter Jay. Later they stopped at the De Gregoire Inn. Their daughter, Camilla, stayed with her nurse at Bar Harbor while Col. and Mrs. Torr went to Ottawa and Victoria, Canada, on an official tour. Upon returning from Canada Col. and Mrs. Torr attended the Army maneuvers at Seattle, Wash., and later visited Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard at their ranch in Colorado. They flew from there to Chicago, and thence to Philadelphia.

Bridal Planned For Miss Antrim

Of wide interest in Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Sarah Denny Antrim to William Edward Cole, Jr., made by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Antrim, of Worthington, Columbus, Ohio.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Maj. Gen. William Edward Cole, U. S. A., and Mrs. Cole of Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio. Gen. Cole is the corps commander of the Fifth Corps Area.

Miss Antrim is a graduate of Swarthmore College and since finishing there has traveled extensively. Her fiancé, who is American vice consul in Vancouver, British Columbia, prepared for college at Punahou School in Hawaii, studied at the Sorbonne, and graduated from Dartmouth College in 1932. Although no date is announced for the wedding, it will take place during the fall.

Miss Eberhard is the daughter of a prominent manufacturer of Czechoslovakia. Mr. Kabelac has been vacationing in his country for the past few weeks.

Major Smith Gives Party On His Yacht

Hobby's Passengers Find Horse Show Enthralling Topic.

Helen von Ebbighausen.

What horses have to do with boats is no mystery after yesterday's little joy ride up the Potomac on Maj. Horace B. Smith's good ship Hobby. The whole affair, which had its beginning a few days ago in the form of anonymous invitations to a boat party, was certainly not the tangle it was meant to be.

The inception of Maj. Smith's cruises past the chalk white serenity of the Watergate with a turn near Georgetown towers dates back to last spring. Backtracking from the arrival of a simple mimeographed map directing guests to the Corinthian Yacht Club, to gas dock and the Hobby, a little Sherlocking revealed that the inclosed telephone number had a definite connection with the headquarters of the Inter-American Horse Show Association.

Connection Revealed.

A ring to the Corinthian club brought the name of the owner of the Hobby; and the name of Maj. Smith summoned up remembrance of the executive committee list of the Inter-American which by now should be doing something to advertise the show which begins October 21 to last through the twenty-fourth.

Mrs. Gyles Merrill, assisted by Maj. Karl S. Bradford, acted as hostesses for Maj. Smith and his guests. The first to board the President's yacht, Potomac, when the Hobby unexpectedly eased up to its starboard side. Lieut. Augustus D. Clark, of the Potomac, which is now moored at the Navy Yard, greeted the Hobby passengers and showed them the immaculate coast-guard cutter. Then as his guests left he gallantly presented Mrs. Bradford, the wife of a cavalry officer, with a can of metal polish and the compliments of the Navy, clearing up the cost to the national debt.

Talk of Belgian Horse.

Conversation during the rest of the trip metedly fringed on subject of the coming horse show. The early arrival of the Belgian team with their horses will give the mounts sufficient time to recover their land legs and their riders time to have their pictures taken. Great tales were spun of the prowess and the dramatic color of the great, gray Belgian horse, Ibrahim, a record jumper. Joseph Kauffman, of Station WMAL, had his notebook out and assigned a program for October 19 to the horse show. News reporters heard with relief of new accommodations in the press box and planned their equipment. Late in the afternoon as the Hobby slid into gas dock, the party comment was that the Belgian officers were just sailing from Brussels with their mounts aboard ship. Thus the conclusion was written to the little saga on what horses have to do with boats.

Dorothy Savage Sails for Europe

Chevy Chase Girl to Study Year in Germany.

Miss Dorothy Savage, daughter of Mrs. Alfred Savage, of Chevy Chase, has been visiting in Bronxville, N. Y., this week prior to sailing yesterday on the Europa for a year's study in Germany. This term of graduate work in the University of Heidelberg will be Miss Savage's second year of foreign study, as she has also studied at the University of Munich. For both periods of foreign university work, she received scholarship awards. Miss Savage is a graduate of the University of Maryland, class of 1937.

American Legion Auxiliary Committee Chairmen Spengler Legion Auxiliary

Inducts New President Here

Mrs. John McCabe Presents Mrs. Martin Dyer With Gavel; Other Officers Are Welcomed to Posts.

At the left is Mrs. Frank T. Hines, chairman of the honorary members committee of the American Legion Auxiliary, and on the right is Mrs. Thomas Mason, Jr., general chairman of the distinguished guests committee of the same organization.

The American Legion Auxiliary activities in Washington form an important part of the work of women's organizations in Washington each season. Each unit is very proud of the distinguished women they have on their membership and officer list.

The members of Spengler Unit of the auxiliary welcomed a new president, Mrs. Martin Dyer, last night with much gratification, for Mrs. Dyer is high in the councils of the national organization having served as a national officer and committee chairman and also as a past department president. The Spengler unit, which is noteworthy among American Legion Auxiliary units in Washington for its civic and patriotic work, has a membership of 105.

Added interest was given to the presentation of the gavel to Mrs. Dyer last night by the retiring president, Mrs. John McCabe, because Mrs. McCabe has just been elected the District head of the famous Women's National Eight and Forty, with the imposing title of La Chapeau Departmental.

Other new officers who were welcomed at the meeting last night were Vice President Mrs. Edith Lamberth; second vice president, Mrs. Elizabeth Lavenex; treasurer, Mrs. Blanche Brown; historian, Mrs. Naomi Painter; parliamentarian, Mrs. Jennie Knight; chaplain, Mrs. Hattie Byram; color bearers, Mrs. Gladys Neilson, and Mrs. Gladys Clements; sergeant at arms Mrs. Nellie Shroth.

Reports on the activities of the District of Columbia members of the American Legion Auxiliary at the recent New York conventions are heard at the first meetings of each unit in Washington.

District of Columbia delegates attended the State dinner at which the department commander of the American Legion Tom Mason and Joseph J. Malloy, national executive committee member, were guests of the auxiliary department. The D. C. Auxiliary delegates included Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, chairman; Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, newly elected department president; Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, secretary of the delegation; Miss Edna McIntosh, Miss Minnie May Hardy, Mrs. E. Louise Warren, and Miss Nicie Perrell, national executive committee woman.

The first executive committee meeting of the season in Washington will be held tomorrow night when Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, department president, will make announcements of the plans and programs for the season. The membership has been divided into three divisions, each one under the jurisdiction of a vice president. Division 1, of which Mrs. Helen McCabe is vice president, includes the following units: James Reese Europe, Nash, Lincoln, McGroarty, Police and Agriculture. The 1938 quota set for Division 1 is 875; Division 2, 885; Division 3, 790. Making a total for the department of 2,550.

Mrs. Frank T. Hines has been appointed chairman of the distinguished guests honorary members committee with a committee which included Mrs. L. E. Atkins, Mrs. Julius I. Peyser, Mrs. Watson B. Miller, Mrs. J. O'Connor Roberts, Mrs. Joe J. Malloy and Mrs. James T. Brady. The general chairman of the distinguished guests committee is Mrs. Tom Mason, Jr., assisted by Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, Mrs. Irene Arnold, Mrs. Mary Corwin, Mrs. Marie Dyer and Miss Edna McIntosh. Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren will serve as department secretary and Mrs. Perna Zolt as assistant secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, of Seattle, Wash., was elected to the presidency of the American Legion Auxiliary at the national convention held in New York. She succeeds Mrs. O. W. Hahn, of Wayne, Neb., as national president.

Mrs. Roger Robb will entertain at a supper party for Miss Priscilla Robb, whose marriage to Elliot Allen Billings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Billings, will take place next Tuesday. The affair will be given the night before the wedding at the home of the hostess in Alexandria.

As Mr. Billings and his future bride will not leave for their honeymoon until the Thursday after their wedding, Miss Emily Ritter, who will be a bridesmaid, will give a party in their honor on Wednesday evening.

Miss Robb is the daughter of the judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District and Mrs. Charles H. Robb.

Miss Boardman To Honor Aides

Tea to Be Given for 300 Taking Part in Red Cross Roll Call.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman will honor 300 uniformed workers who will assist her with booths during Roll Call at a tea tomorrow afternoon at the District Chapter House of the Red Cross. Miss Boardman, who is national secretary of the Red Cross, will have assisting her Mrs. Warren Spencer, Miss Della Dennison, and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift, assistant in charge of booths.

Distinguished and socially prominent guests will include Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Jean de Sibour and Miss Nancy Leiter. Red Cross enrollment booths will be located in the larger banks and hotels, and Mrs. Swanson will direct one to be operated at the Willard Hotel by the Navy and Marine Corps. Mrs. de Sibour will be in charge of one at the Carlton Hotel, and Mrs. Walker L. Reed will direct that run by the Army Sewing Unit at Jelliffe's.

Roll Call for the District Chapter opened Sunday with approximately 10,000 Red Cross volunteers aiding. Marcy L. Sperry, chairman of the drive, said that this year's quota had been set at 75,000 members. The campaign will extend through October 16.

Chairmen in charge of the various booths include Mrs. Philip Young, Mrs. Edward C. Lord, Mrs. R. W. Howard, Mrs. Joseph Salomon, Mrs. H. R. Krinbill, Mrs. Albert N. Bagges, Mrs. Norman Engel, Mrs. Griffith Evans, Miss Grace S. Wright, Mrs. John Kratz, Mrs. L. F. Schmeckebier, Miss Della C. Dennison, Mrs. R. L. Ettinger, Mrs. H. J. Foster, Mrs. Louis E. Roschen, Mrs. W. R. Israelson, Mrs. Edward Goring and Mrs. George W. Calver.

20th Century Club Meets Next Week

Dr. W. C. Johnstone to Talk on Far East.

The Twentieth Century Club will hold its first fall meeting in Barker Hall at the Y. W. C. A. on Thursday, October 7, at 11 o'clock. Dr. William Crane Johnstone, Jr., professor of political science and dean of the Junior College of George Washington University, will speak on "America's Stake in the Orient."

Dr. Johnstone is an international authority on affairs of the East, a noted lecturer and author of numerous articles and books on our possessions in the Orient and the problems of these Oriental countries.

Mrs. Johnstone will be the guest of the club at the luncheon following the meeting.

Col. William N. Taylor is staying at the Carlton Hotel. He arrived in Washington recently from New York City.

Word Is Received Of Miss Atwater's Marriage in N. Y.

Announcements have been received of the marriage on September 17 of Miss Catherine Merriam Atwater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woodard Atwood, of New York, to John Kenneth Galbraith. The ceremony took place at the Reformed Church of North Hempstead, in Manhasset, N. Y., and immediately afterward the young couple sailed for England, where Mr. Galbraith has a year's fellowship at Cambridge University.

The bride is a niece of Miss Helen Atwater, of Washington, and spent several months here this year working at the Congressional Library. A graduate of Smith College in 1934, she spent her junior year at the Sorbonne in Paris and received her M. A. degree at Radcliffe.

Mr. Galbraith, who was associated with the Brookings Institute here last summer, will return to his work in the economics department of Harvard University next fall.

Women's City Club Postpones Project

A series of "short talks on large subjects," which was to have begun on Monday, October 4, at the Women's City Club, has been postponed to the following Monday owing to renovations now being made at the clubhouse on Lafayette square.

Mrs. Margaret Hill is in charge of registrations for the lectures, which will cover law, languages, rhythm, short story, writing, public speaking, and personality.

The committee in charge of this new educational membership plan is headed by Miss Dorothy Doran, and includes Mrs. Julia Hopkins, Mrs. G. A. Schult, Mrs. Nadine Lane Gallagher, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the club.

The instructors in the short talks will be Mrs. Ruth P. Martinez, Mrs. Augusta Spaulding, Mrs. Embert LeLacheur, Mrs. Sylvia Ziskind, Mrs. Agnes Giles Newman, and several others.

The Federal Alcohol Administrator, W. S. Alexander, and Mrs. Alexandria, who has just returned from a European vacation with their two children, Agnes and Billy, have taken a home for the winter at 3110 Dumbarton avenue.

Mrs. David Kaline and her daughter, Miss Gladys Kaline, who have been living at 1150 Connecticut avenue, have taken an apartment at the Mayflower for the winter.

Mrs. Grace Poole Wed to Doctor

Former Club Federation President Is Quietly Married.

Ossining, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, former president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, and Dr. Harry C. Reynolds, of Paducah, Ky., were married here today at the home of Mrs. Poole's brother, William H. Morrison.

The simple Lutheran ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Bierke, of Troy, N. Y., before a few close friends and relatives. There were no attendants. A reception was held after the wedding and later today the couple planned to sail for a Bermuda trip, after which they will be at home in Paducah.

Mrs. Poole wore a rust-colored suit with hat to match, a golden blouse and a corsage of brown orchids.

Dr. Reynolds is an eye and ear specialist connected with the Illinois Central Hospital at Paducah and is president of the Kentucky State Medical Association. His first wife died a number of years ago.

Mrs. Poole retired last spring as dean of Stoneleigh College, at Rye, N. H., a post she assumed at the beginning of the 1935 school year.

A native of Wakefield, Mass., Mrs. Reynolds has long been prominent in national women's affairs. She has lectured and traveled extensively. Her first husband, J. Harry Poole, of Brockton, Mass., died in 1910.

Here Next Week.

G. Bryan Pitts, sentenced to 14 years for conspiracy to embezzle in the $5,000,000 failure of the F. H. Smith Co. here, was subpoenaed at Eastern. Reform story yesterday.

The once socially-prominent broker was called in the tax deficiency case of H. O. Hart, of Montgomery County, a public accountant who worked for him, in 1932. Pitts, Hart and Mrs. Pitts were indicted in 1934, charged with conspiring to defraud the government of $2,020,000 in income taxes between 1928 and 1931.

Hart has asked the Tax Board to redetermine a $1,877 deficiency in 1932 income taxes and a '938 penalty for alleged fraud. He contends the Bureau erred in assessing certain fees against him as being received. He also contends the Board

Hart told the Board Pitts engaged him as a public accountant in 1932 but made no payments to him. He said he received no payment from the Smith Co. in 1932.

Robert H. Jackson, then assistant general counsel of the Bureau, asserted Hart filed "false and fraudu-

Wheat Prices Advance With Export Buying

Purchases for Over-the-Sea Shipment Total 1,500,000 Bu.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Much enlarged export purchases of United States wheat, estimated as high as upwards of 1,500,000 bushels, helped lift wheat values a cent a bushel today. Last-minute realizing of profits, however, shaded the gains somewhat.

More than 1,000,000 bushels of domestic wheat was asserted to have been bought today for shipment to Europe by way of the Gulf of Mexico.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures varied from 1/2 of a cent off to 1/2 of a cent up from yesterday's finish. Dec. 1937-1938, May 1938-1939, July 1938-1939, and Oct. 1938-1939, all advanced 1/2 cent, while Dec. 1937-1938, May 1938-1939, July 1938-1939, and Oct. 1938-1939, all advanced 1/2 cent.

Cotton Eases With Selling

New York, Sept. 29.—Cotton displayed renewed easiness today under liquidation promoted by weakness of other markets and hedge selling. December declined from 8.28 to 8.20 and closed at 8.21 with final prices 8 to 16 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 7 points lower in sympathy with declines at Liverpool and Bombay. Increased Southern selling was stimulated by continued open weather in the belt.

Death of Peel Robs Palestine Of Peacemaker

70-Year-Old British Envoy Fails to See Goal of Years Realized.

By the Associated Press.
London, Sept. 29.—The "father of Palestine peace," Lord Robert Peel, died before peace came to the Holy Land he sought to pacify by division.

The 70-year-old head of the Royal British Palestine Commission succumbed at his Petersfield home yesterday after several weeks of illness.

When Arab-Jewish disorders spread bloodshed in Britain's mandate, Lord Peel was chosen to head the commission and make corrective recommendations.

His commission report, advocating division of Palestine into an Arab state, a Jewish state and a mandated area, started a controversy that still rages far beyond the borders of Palestine.

Served in India.

His political career started as a conservative member of Parliament and member of the London County Council. He served successively as undersecretary of state for war, minister of transport and in 1922 became secretary of state for India.

Escaped Bandits.

His last year had been spent almost exclusively seeking to solve the ancient racial conflicts of Palestine. While traveling in the Holy Land early this year Lord Peel had a narrow escape from armed bandits on the Jericho-Jerusalem highway.

He later returned to London and defended his proposals in a vigorous Parliamentary speech, though admitting the difficulties of putting the plan into operation. In addition he broadcast an appeal to Jews and Arabs asking study of the commission report in a spirit of goodwill.

The report has been submitted to the League of Nations mandate commission, but has not been acted upon.

Col. Buchanan Funeral Today At Arlington

Reserve Officer, Well-Known in D. C., Dies in Pittsburgh.

Funeral services will be held in Arlington National Cemetery today for Col. James Buchanan, 67, of the Reserve Corps, son of the late Representative James Buchanan of New Jersey.

Col. Buchanan died in Aspinwall Veterans' Hospital, Pittsburgh, last Saturday, after having been suddenly taken ill on a motor trip to Oakland, Calif.

As a youth in Washington, Col. Buchanan was captain of the House pages. Later he belonged to the President's cavalry guard. During the World War he served as a captain in the aviation corps.

After the Armistice he had charge of the military photographers who accompanied President Wilson on his trips to France and Italy.

Returning to the United States, he served as information officer at the Post Office Department under General Gurnea, and later as a civilian in the War Department.

Dr. Jameson Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Dr. John Franklin Jameson, historian and chief of the division of manuscripts, Library of Congress, will be held at 2 p. m. today at All Souls Memorial Church. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Pallbearers for Dr. Jameson will be Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of the Library of Congress, and Dr. W. A. Hammond and Alan Boyd, of that institution's staff; Charles Henry Butler, Dr. Leo F. Stock, Dr. Edmund S. Burnett, William Lincoln Brown, Harold N. Fowler, Waldo G. Leland, Dr. Henry E. Bourne, Walter M. Gilbert, Dr. Ernest Richardson and Dr. Robert Connors.

Dr. Jameson, who died Tuesday at his home, 2231 Q street northwest, is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. John H. Beck, of Annapolis, Md., and a son, Francis C. Jameson, of Washington; a sister, Miss Helen Jameson, of Woburn, Mass., and a brother, Arthur Jameson, of Branford, Conn.

Capt. Spear Dies; Naval Physician

Capt. Raymond Spear, Medical Corps, 64, U. S. Navy, retired, died Tuesday in Coronado, Calif. He was one of the outstanding surgeons of the Medical Corps.

A member of the American College of Surgeons and the American Medical Association, he was on duty as an instructor in Surgery at the Naval Medical School here from 1909 until 1914.

During the early part of the World War Capt. Spear was commanding officer of the Naval Hospital, Annapolis, Md., and from 1918 until 1922 was in charge of the Naval Hospital at Yokohama, Japan.

Born in Nice, France, in 1873, Capt. Spear graduated in medicine from Tufts Medical College, in 1895 and entered the Navy two years later. He was a holder of the Spanish Campaign Medal, the Philippine Medal and the Victory Medal.

Capt. Spear is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Coppinger Spear.

Terry and the Pirates

The Story Trapped in a barren mining camp, ill from exposure caused by saving Thus Far the life of Sandhurst, his most bitter foe and insidiously jealous husband of Normandie, the girl he loves, Pat Ryan, a central figure in the comic strip, now finds himself mysteriously jailed in a death-trap dungeon with Connie and Terry, his two best friends.

Who is his mysterious captor? Is it Sandhurst or an unsuspected enemy? Can the three victims escape? What has happened to Normandie? Continue the story on this page today.

Bob Burns Says—

I sometimes wonder if all these modern conveniences ain't makin' a soft race out of us. Of course, if them scientists want to invent all them electrical gadgets to make our work easier, you can't blame us for usin' 'em. I suppose it goes hand in hand with progress, but I know one lady who carries the modern conveniences a little bit too far.

The other day I was over to her house, visitin', when her little boy's nurse came in and complained about all the bad things the little boy had been doing. The lady called her boy in and says, "Rollo, you've been a naughty boy—you go right into the electric vibrator and give yourself a good shaking."

Black Is Silent On Klan, Visits At Alexandria

Hints He Will Make Statement Over Radio; Invited to Speak.

Hill near Alexandria, where he will live for several weeks. The Durrs met Black in Norfolk and drove with him here. Mrs. Durr is a sister of Mrs. Black, and Durr is an R.F.C. attorney. Again confronted by the press, Black refused to amplify his earlier statements.

Black and his relatives were in a happy mood, but he stood by his former pledge that he would have nothing further to say "today." In reply to a question, he only said he would go to his office "when I get ready." Then he added, laughing, "when I get a chance to see my folks."

His probable choice of the radio for his first formal reply to Klan membership allegations, first carried in the newspapers, would follow a game of hide-and-go-seek with correspondents in London hotels, and indicated resentment against press treatment of the case. His reply may come Saturday night.

Officials of the National Broadcasting Co. said they had extended Black a written invitation to speak over their national hook-up, offering him a choice of time. Officials of the Columbia Broadcasting System said they had extended a similar invitation through a relative of the new justice. Black last night had accepted neither offer.

Radio Offer on Ship.
Earlier, the former Senator received his first offer of radio time, while still aboard ship in mid-ocean. The National Broadcasting Co. invited him to make any statement he might care to make. Black radioed in reply: "Thanks for offer. Will inform you if I desire to avail myself of it."

The Blacks leased their Washington home before leaving for Europe, and passed their last days in Washington with friends at the Army War College barracks. A swift canvass by the press of his probable stopping place here followed his disappearance in Norfolk traffic on the road to Washington.

At dusk the automobile bearing the justice's party turned into the sparsely-settled lane on Seminary Hill.

Greeted by 50 Reporters.
A corps of nearly 50 reporters was on hand in Norfolk, when his ship, the City of Norfolk, arrived in the hazy early morning. Reporters boarded the boat after it left quarantine. They cruised out to meet it on a customs boat, accompanied by the Durrs and other friends of the justice. The newsmen knocked on his stateroom door as Black was preparing to go to breakfast. He went on the deck, posed for pictures. Then he agreed to meet reporters after breakfast on an upper deck.

His first greeting was: "Good morning. This certainly is a fine reception I'm getting." He continued affable through most of the interview, and again repeated: "This certainly is a fine reception you folks are giving me." To photographers, he said: "No hurry, boys. But on two occasions, Black ceased to smile. It was near the end of the interview when the blunt question was asked that had drawn reporters to Norfolk to meet his incoming ship.

"Are you a member of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan?" a reporter ventured. "I've said all that I am going to say at this time," the justice replied.

Answers Question Sharply.
To another question, Black replied sharply.

William H. Mylander, correspondent of the newspaper that carried the Klan allegations against Black, asked if he would like to have copies of the series of articles. "Suppose you take them back to Mr. Black," Paul Block, publisher of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, the former Senator replied.

He received in his cabin some of the friends who came to meet him. After the ship tied up, Black cordially shook hands with some of his fellow passengers and quickly left the boat.

Besides the Durrs, driving back to Alexandria with Mr. and Mrs. Black were Thomas M. Woodard, of the Maritime Commission and Mrs. Woodard, and Mrs. Black's brother-in-law, Sterling J. Foster, of Birmingham and Washington.

Fellow passengers reported he was not seasick on the trip across and commented favorably on the new justice as "an exceedingly nice person."

Father of 2 Kills Himself by Gas
Clarence Fugitt, 35, father of two children, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen at his home, 1248 Sixth street southwest, yesterday.

Six stove burners were open, police were told by the landlady who discovered the body.

Detective Serg. William J. Liverman, said Fugitt's relatives had stated the man had been drinking. No reason was given for suicide.

Coroner A. Macruder MacDonald said he would issue a certificate of suicide.

After the body was removed to the morgue, he found a farewell note, addressed to his wife. It read: "Goodbye babe, I'm going to end it all. I took this place for this purpose." It was signed "Love and kisses Clarence."

Wirephotos: Camera Barrage Greets Justice Black at Norfolk

Most unusual in the way of pictures of Supreme Court Justices is this series of photos made of Associate Justice Hugo L. Black upon his arrival yesterday. With flashlight bulbs blinding him from all sides, the former Senator appeared as affable as in the days when he served the U. S. Senate. In photo above, he is waving to crowd of admirers. At right, his arms are being held by a newsman while a colleague snaps the picture.

$750 Per Month Is 'Chickenfeed' To Irene Castle

Chicago, Sept. 29 (P).—Take $750 a month, subtract bills for Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin's household maintenance, food, tips, telephone, a nurse and her son's tuition and what has she got?

Father O'Leary Sails.

Nearly recovered from a long illness, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, sailed yesterday from New York for a visit in Jamaica.

It was said at the university he expects to return to his duties here on October 16.

Scholar Awards At G.U. Announced

The Rev. Aloysius J. Hogan, dean of the Graduate School of Georgetown University, announced yesterday the following awards of fellowships and scholarships in the school:

Fellowships—For the doctorate in history, Walter W. Wilkinson, University of Texas; doctorate in political science, Gerald W. Downey, City College of New York; master's degree in physics, Robert A. Herling, Jr., Georgetown College; master's degree in history, Michael J. Farrell, Georgetown College, and master's degree in history, Francis P. McGrath, Georgetown College.

Scholarships—History, Vernon L. Merrill, West Virginia Wesleyan University; Leo W. Tighe, Trinity College, Sioux City, Iowa, and Herman Schauger, of University of Indiana.

Mrs. Roosevelt Returning.
Le Havre, Sept. 29 (P).—Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the American President, sailed homeward aboard the Ile de France after a summer tour in Europe.

War Foe Will Speak.
Warren D. Mullin, secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, will speak at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at a luncheon of the Washington Round Table at the Cosmos Club. Mullin's subject will be, "Present World Conditions." James E. Smith, president of Round Table International, will be a luncheon guest. William A. Edelblut will preside.

Word was passed out quickly here that within a week James D. Ross, Securities Exchange Commissioner and manager of Seattle's publicly owned power system, would be named administrator of the Bonneville hydroelectric plant.

It was reported that Mr. Roosevelt was giving consideration of a special session of Congress around November 15.

On the Air Today

Two new programs will be heard today from WJSV. Kate Smith returns to a new series at 8 in a variety show designed again to challenge Rudy Vallee's long hold on the 8 o'clock hour Thursday nights. For the premiere: Tallulah Bankhead and Henry Fonda in scenes from "Camille"; a "Parade of Champions" series presenting sports heroes of the year, another "heroism award" series and varied music. At 12 noon, WJSV presents the first of a series of programs with Peggy Tudor and guest speakers with the Tudor orchestra.

George Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" cycle is adapted to radio in WMAL's presentation of the Shavian version of the story of mankind at 8:30. With Peggy Wood and Irene Tedrow, as Eve and Lillith. Also James Meighan and Helen Claire.

"Sinfonietta," with Alfred Wallenstein, at WOL, at 9:30, presents Sinfonia for double orchestra in E Flat No. 1, Opus 18, by Bach. Also Pastorale d'Ete by Honeger and Chaboff's "Dedication."

WRC's "big three" present, as follows: At 8, Rudy Vallee hour, Tommy Riggs and Betty Lou; Oliver Wakefield and Stroud Twins, and the return to American radio of Hildegarde. At 9, in the "Show Boat," Bob Stevens, Will Aubrey, Swiss yodeler, and Zerkova, Russian contralto. At 10, Bob Burns presents Margot and Richard Bonelli.

Black's Return Evokes No Sign From President

Roosevelt's Concern Over Klan Issue Declared Abated.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 29.—President Roosevelt, for the first time since he left Hyde Park a week ago, spent today relaxing, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, as his party speculated whether he would have anything further to say about Ku Klux Klan affiliations of Justice Black.

Except for an automobile ride in Seattle, the President remained at the Boettiger home throughout the day, receiving courtesy calls, preparatory to making a "good neighbor" visit to Victoria, British Columbia, tomorrow. If the President speaks in Canada he may re-emphasize this country's desire for world peace.

No sign came from Mr. Roosevelt that he was aware Justice Black had landed in this country and again had declined to make any statement regarding his alleged Klan membership.

Word was passed out quickly here that within a week James D. Ross, Securities Exchange Commissioner and manager of Seattle's publicly owned power system, would be named administrator of the Bonneville hydroelectric plant.

It was reported that Mr. Roosevelt was giving consideration of a special session of Congress around November 15.
